The Colorado returned to the Naval Base at San Pedro last night from gunnery practice, bringing with her the dead and injured.

The Colorado was engaged in target practice off Santa Rosa Island in the Santa Barbara group about 45 miles northwest of San Pedro. The hospital ship Relief was ordered in readiness and it is understood that the dead and injured were removed to her. The explosion of an undetermined cause occurred shortly after 3 o'clock in the afternoon and the Colorado put into the Naval Base at San Pedro last night at 8 o'clock.

Bradford From Illinois.

Lieut. Bradford was born in Illinois on August 25, 1899. He entered the United States Naval Academy in July, 1918, and was commissioned an ensign in 1922. He was stationed for some time at Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill., training the R. O. T. C. there.

Born in Kentucky October 30, 1903, Lieut. Quattlebaum later moved to Texas. He entered the Naval Academy August 23, 1923. After serving more than a year was commissioned a lieutenant, junior grade.

Ensign Huntley was appointed from Ohio according to Navy records.

Hurricane Winds Hit Honduras Banana Zone

Tegucigalpa, Honduras, Nov. 5 (U.P.).—Wind of hurricane intensity accompanied by heavy rains swept over the banana zone of Honduras today, creating great property damage and destroying plantations and bridges.

Fifteen persons were reported drowned, and all communication by telegraph or telephone through the northern section was interrupted.

Society Girl Makes African Hop Mark

Flies From England to Cape Town in Less Than Six Days.

Cape Town, Union of South Africa, Nov. 5 (A.P.).—Peggy Salaman, 19-year-old British society girl, stepped out of her own airplane here today after a flight from England in the record time of five and one-half days, cutting a day from the former record, and apologized for arriving so soon to beat the "silly old records."

Miss Salaman, a modern young woman who became so bored with the drawing rooms of London's Mayfair that she took up flying a year ago, was exuberant, but apologetic for waking Capetown so early—it was 7:40 a. m.

Miss Salaman brought one evening gown so she could "dress up" here. In the plane also were two lion cubs, picked up on the way. They will be taken back to London and one given to Princess Elizabeth, daughter of the Duke of York, if the little princess is allowed to accept it, she said.

Pursuit Leader Dies As Plane Dives in Sea

San Diego, Calif., Nov. 5 (A.P.).—Lieut. Comdr. Oscar William Erickson, 35, commander of a pursuit squadron aboard the U. S. S. Saratoga, died today after his plane plunged over the side of the Navy's giant airplane carrier during a landing while the Saratoga was anchored 16 miles offshore.

The officer's companion, George H. Cummings, aviation pilot, was uninjured.

Erickson was planning to tow a target for aerial gunnery practice. As he took off, the towing cable broke, and he circled the ship to land. The landing hook caught in the arresting gear on the deck and the plane swerved overside. Erickson and Cummings freed themselves and started swimming, but before a rope could be thrown to them, Erickson sank.

GARDINER GIVEN BACKING IN VOTE OF NAVY LEAGUE

With but One Dissenting Ballot, Body Supports Leaders' View.

(Associated Press.)

In the face of President Hoover's word that falsehood had been uttered, the executive committee of the Navy League yesterday supported William Howard Gardiner in his declaration that the Chief Executive was injuring the Navy and the country's defense.

With but one dissenting vote, the group, containing some outstanding figures in American life, issued a declaration of faith in the president of the league and support of the position he had taken.

Henry Breckinridge, of New York, former Assistant Secretary of War, dissented, asserting he could not condone the "unseemly and unjustified" language used by Gardiner in the pamphlet which termed Mr. Hoover abysmally ignorant on naval affairs.

Hammond Is Chairman.

The league committee had barely taken action before President Hoover's five-man group, named to investigate the Gardiner statements and find the answer to them in Government records, assembled for work. After four hours in the exclusive Metropolitan Club the members announced they had chosen John Hays Hammond, noted retired mining engineer, to serve as chairman. Hammond said meetings would continue day and night until a report is made to the President.

He maintained his group had been given a free hand by the White House. It is composed of Undersecretary Castle, of the State Department; Assistant Secretary Jahncke, of the Navy Department; Admiral Hugh Rodman, retired, and Eliot Wadsworth, of Boston, who is serving on the President's unemployment commission, and Hammond.

The Navy League statement added to that of Gardiner by affirming that light was needed on the "present conduct of American naval policy."

The committee asserted its welcome of any impartial and comprehensive investigation which would shed this light, and offered the league records for that purpose without reservation. The committee concluded by asserting that "furthermore, it resolves to pursue the purposes and policies for which the Navy League was founded."

Gardiner added his say in a separate declaration, asserting he had is-

120 CHINESE DIE IN RIVER FIGHT, LEAGUE IS TOLD

U. S. to Associate Itself With Any Moves to Avert War.

ORIENT'S COMMERCE IS DEEPLY AFFECTED

Dr. Sze Demands Action by Geneva to Stop Hostilities.

(Associated Press.)

Japanese troops and airplanes killed 120 Chinese soldiers near the Nonni River in Manchuria in two days, China charged in a note delivered yesterday to the League of Nations.

Accusing the Japanese of harassing her troops to force a battle, China asked the league to induce Tokyo to cease "incendiary activities."

Aristide Briand called a special meeting of the Council of the League November 17, in Paris, to take further steps for peace in Manchuria.

By HAROLD J. T. HORAN.

The United States will continue to pursue its efforts for peace in Manchuria in cooperation with the Council of the League of Nations and the other countries signatories of the Kellogg-Briand pact. Nevertheless, the reservations for independent action made to the league council at the time Prentiss Bailey Gilbert was nominated to participate in the discussions at Geneva on behalf of the United States still hold. The United States, now as then, is still exercising its independent judgment. No commitments have been made with regard to any joint action beyond that already taken by the council in Geneva, and the American Government will associate itself with any step leading to the settlement of the difficulties between China and Japan over their Manchurian difficulties, which now threaten to embroil Soviet Russia.

Economic Blockade Provision.

It was recalled here yesterday that the Japanese government had appeared before the league council and had solemnly promised to evacuate its troops as rapidly as possible. This has not been done. Nevertheless, no sanctions or penalties have been even tentatively discussed by the league, and it was definitely established here last night that no such intention is in the program that may be employed by the Kellogg pact signatories.

Under the terms of article 16 of the covenant of the League of Nations, provision is made for the establishment of an economic blockade against any country that refuses to be bound by the arbitral and conciliatory mediation of the league and

Jury Unable to Agree In Poisoning of Child

Lebanon, Ind., Nov. 5 (U.P.).—The jury trying Mrs. Carrie Simmons on a charge of murdering one of her two daughters, who died from eating poisoned sandwiches at a family picnic, was dismissed tonight, after almost 48 hours of deliberation.

"We, the jurors, agree that there is no possibility of an agreement," said Foreman Earl L. Brown in a formal statement at 5:22 p. m. He added that the jury had taken nine ballots. The first was 9 to 3 for acquittal. The last was 8 to 4 for freeing the farm mother.

ARMY BUDGET CUT $44,000,000 LESS

Harmonious Agreement Is Made With Department, Says Hurley.

President Hoover's economy program benefited by $44,000,000 yesterday when Secretary of War Hurley announced that the budget of the War Department had been pruned of approximately 10 per cent of its last year's total to meet the fiscal requirements of the year 1932-1933. This will make the total amount for the Army's share of the national defense appropriations approximately $402,000,000.

On October 16 Secretary of the Navy Adams made public a reduced Navy budget also. The Navy estimates had been subjected to the same careful paring and the total amount saved by the President's economy regime in the Army and Navy combined will amount to almost $103,000,000 for the financial year beginning on July 1, 1932.

The vast savings in the national defense budget will not affect the efficiency of any of the services involved, it was assured. The Secretary of War declared that he had made careful studies of the departmental and divisional schedules of the Army and that the cuts that had been made consisted in the suppression of obsolescent material, the tightening up of the units available and the deferment of programs not vital at the present time.

These measures of economy will accomplish a two-fold object; they will enable the United States to present to the nations of the world at the forthcoming general disarmament conference in Geneva a program of economy and armament reduction that is already an accomplished fact; secondly, it will enable the President to adhere to his program of departmental economy in order to pass on to the taxpayer the benefits of all reductions and so forestall any increase in the income tax.

The complete details of these reductions in the budget of Secretary Hurley will not be revealed until President Hoover has presented his budget requirements to Congress for approval.

The adoption of the budget for the Army followed a final reading of the War Department's draft at a lengthy meeting of the War Council here yesterday. The various branches of the Army were represented by their respective chiefs and the final details of the budgetary requirements were carefully gone over by them. Following this meeting Secretary Hurley made the following announcement:

"The War Department has settled with the director of the budget its proposed expenditures for the year

Mussolini and Pope Set Conference for Monday

Rome, Nov. 6 (A.P.).—Premier Mussolini's state visit to Pope Pius XI, arranged as a public demonstration that the church and state in Italy once more are living in accord, was set today for next Monday.

The premier will be received with honors conforming with his high office when finally he makes his long deferred call at Vatican City.

Three Able Fliers Die Among Crash Victims

Cox and Lucas Had Built Up Enviable Records as Pilots With Ludington Lines; Smith Served Overseas During World War.

Three of the men who perished in the Ludington plane crash yesterday have been closely identified with aviation. Two of the dead men had built up enviable records as pilots with the Ludington Line, while the third served as a captain in the American Air Corps in France and had flown several hundred hours.

Two Washington residents, in addition to the two pilots, were among the five who lost their lives in the crash. They were Elmer Smith, advertising manager of the Washington Herald, who lived in Harvard Hall Apartments, 1550 Harvard street northwest, who was a pilot in France, and George B. Taylor, chief of the laboratory of the Chestnut Farms Dairy, who lived at 1514 Seventeenth street northwest.

Floyd Cox, who lived at the Alban Towers and was one of the senior pilots of the line, flew the first load of passengers out of Washington airport for the Ludington Company a year ago last September, when he took a plane of cadets back to New York. He had a host of friends here, being employed by the Universal Flyers, barnstorming with a trimotored plane here out of Washington airport for some time. He was married, but had no children.

Cox had been flying for eight years and had never been involved in an accident. He learned to fly when employed in the composing room of the Sioux City (Iowa) Journal. He worked for some time in the composing room of the Washington News before he took up aviation as a career.

Cox was intensely proud of his enviable record of more than 3,000 hours in the air without an accident. When he joined the Ludington Lines, when the firm was founded more than a year ago, he wrote: "I have had a little over 2,000 hours in the air. Most of that time was spent more than a mile above sea level. I am proud of my record of never having an accident with a plane."

Cox was the holder of all speed records over the route of the Luding-

24 Community Charity Drives Exceed Quotas

New York, Nov. 5 (U.P.).—Twenty-four out of 32 Community Chest campaigns in cities in all sections of the country exceeded their goals, the Association of Community Chests reported today to Walter S. Gifford, director of the President's organization on unemployment relief. In the 32 campaigns $7,893,173 was contributed.

Mr. Gifford has been watching the results of Community Chest campaigns to determine the degree of success communities will have in meeting their unemployment relief problems this winter on a basis of local responsibility.

Boy Killed by Car Of Representative

Lad, Confused, Runs in Front of Auto Driven by Earl C. Michener.

Parma, Mich., Nov. 5 (A.P.).—A car driven by Representative Earl C. Michener, of Adrian, today struck and killed an 8-year-old boy who was walking along U. S. Highway 12, near here.

The boy, Robert Moe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Moe, was returning to school for his spectacles and was walking with his hand before his face, as a protection against the wind. When Representative Michener sounded his horn the boy apparently became confused and ran in front of the car. He was thrown into a guard rail and died instantly. Coroner John Pulling ordered an inquest for tomorrow afternoon.

Deeply affected by the accident, Representative Michener said he would not go to Washington Saturday as he had planned, but would come to Parma for the funeral.

Secretary Doak Suffers Attack of Indigestion

(Associated Press.)

Overwork and an attack of indigestion yesterday had Secretary Doak confined to bed at his home in McLean, Va. At his office, however, it was said the Secretary of Labor was not seriously ill. He has taken no vacation since entering office last December.

His physician ordered that he remain in bed all of this week and that he take a rest afterward.

RELATIVES OF DEAD WAITED AT FIELD

Wife of Ill-Fated Pilot First to Learn of Tragedy in Airport Crowd.

A sudden but brief wave of hysteria surged through the Washington Airport when word was flashed from Camden, N. J., of the fatal crash there of the Washington-bound express plane in which five men lost their lives.

Officials of the Ludington Line in the operations office here stared aghast when the monotonous ticking of the company's teletype machine spelled out the story of the disaster.

It was some seconds before the airport executives could realize the horrible import of the message, but almost telepathically the news spread about the field.

Mrs. Evelyn Cox, wife of Pilot Floyd Cox, was standing on the field waiting for her husband and chatting with an unidentified woman who had gone to the airport to await Elmer Smith, advertising manager of the Washington Herald.

It was to Mrs. Cox that the news of her husband's death first was revealed. The other woman then was informed of Smith's death. Both women naturally were prostrated by the shock of the news, but managed to walk to the operations office, where they collapsed in uncontrollable hysteria.

They demanded that a plane be equipped immediately to fly them to the scene of the crash; but the airport officials, realizing the futility of such a procedure, calmed the women, and they left the field in an automobile to make the trip by road.

Several persons at the field expecting passengers arriving on other planes, not knowing what had happened, added to the general confusion and hysteria, thinking that their friends or relatives had been killed or injured, and it was with difficulty that the company officials were able to convince them that all other Plane, Arriving at Field in Camden, Buries Nose 2 Feet in Ground.

FLOYD COX WAS PILOT OF CARRIER AT TIME

WITNESSES DETAIL STORY OF TRAGEDY

Motorists and Attendants at Airport Rush to Scene, but Fail at Rescue.

Five persons were carried to their deaths last night when a Ludington Line express transport nearing the Camden Airport crashed upon a nearby golf course.

The dead are:

Floyd Cox, crack pilot of the Ludington Line and holder of the Washington-New York speed record. He lived at Alban Towers.

Vernon R. Lucas, 32 years old, also a pilot, the father of four children, who lived in Oakcrest, Va.

Elmer Smith, 35 years old, of Harvard Hall Apartments, advertising director of the Washington Herald.

George B. Taylor, 35 years old, bacteriologist and chief of the laboratory of the Chestnut Farms Dairy. He lived at 1514 Seventeenth street northwest.

Ehle From Philadelphia.

Francis R. Ehle, of Riverton, N. J., president of the International Resistance Co., of Philadelphia.

Before the crash the speedy plane was seen to circle the airport. Its riding lights came from the wings and its beams cleaved the darkness at an altitude of 300 feet, as it maneuvered for a landing. Pilot Cox was at the controls.

Witnesses said they saw the nose of the plane point toward the ground. Flames were seen licking about the motor, they said.

Like a meteor it crashed to the Cooper Creek golf course. Motorists on the highway and attendants at the Camden Airport rushed to the scene, but rescue work was of no avail because of the heat and intensity of the flames.

The only thing salvaged from the plane was a package addressed to the Western Union Telegraph Co. It bounced out of the plane as it crashed and escaped the fire.

Jennett Account Differs.

Perhaps the best account of the crash is given by John Jennett, station master of the airport, who said he saw the plane circling low, about 200 feet in the air. His account differed with other witnesses, because he saw no flames. "Suddenly," he said, "it nosed to the ground, and I heard an explosion."

Another witness, a motorist, said he thought he saw two sacks thrown from a window. When he reached the scene of the crash, the nose of the black and white Lockheed Orion monoplane, the queen of the Luding-

Gandhi, Clad in Loin Cloth, Is Received by Royalty

Scotland Yard Automobile Conducts East Indian to Buckingham, Where He Is Surrounded by Guests in Formal Dress.

London, Nov. 5 (U.P.).—The Mahatma Mohandaas Karamchand Gandhi pattered through the corridors of Buckingham Palace today in sandaled feet, his frail brown body swathed in a voluminous shawl and his thin middle clothed in a loin cloth of more dashing cut than on ordinary occasions, to meet their majesties, King George and Queen Mary.

In his costume, which ignored the royal request for "formal dress," the little Indian leader was the center of attraction among 400 guests invited to tea. Even the gorgeous, gem-encrusted turbans of his colleagues could not distract attention from the bald pate and ascetic countenance of the man who is revered by millions of Hindus.

The mahatma bowed graciously to the king and queen, clasped their hands in friendly but not humble fashion and chatted with them for five minutes. But he violated another custom when he declined the tea and other refreshments set out for the guests, departing hurriedly after his interview with royalty.

Gandhi was taken to the palace in an automobile put at his disposal by Scotland Yard. A tall inspector sat on the front seat, while Gandhi's secretary, Mahadeo Desai, and Mrs. Sarojin Naidu, who is closely associated with him in his political movement, occupied the rear seats.

At the gates of the palace, where thousands of Londoners had gathered to watch the incoming celebrities, Gandhi leaned from the automobile and flashed his amiable, toothless smile at the crowd. He was loudly cheered.

As Gandhi's brown legs, showing beneath the shawl, carried him up the palace staircase, it was recalled

Vine-glo Becomes Memory As Firm Abandons Its Sale

Fruit Industries, Ltd., Counseled Here by Mrs. Willebrandt, Henceforth Will Distribute Only Pure Grape Juice for Soft Drinks, Is Decision.

By LAWRENCE SULLIVAN.

The man who looks after the bubbles in the basement passed out of the picture yesterday, and the chemical mysteries of legal fermentation are again the charge of the American citizen.

Fruit Industries, Ltd., formally announced that it has given up the Vine-glo ghost and will sell, henceforth, only pure grape juice "for soft drinks."

The decision means that furnaceside service is no more; that everyone must provide his own bottles and corks; that there will be no more California-sunshine labels to paste beneath the swanky tinfoil on the crystalline quarts. Every man now must mind his own sauterne.

In announcing the decision, Donald Conn, managing director of Fruit Industries' Washington headquarters, explained that the new policy was voluntary. It was admitted, however, that the recent decision of the Federal Court in Kansas City, in the case of the Ukiah Grape Products Co., had influenced the abandonment of the fermentation service. The Kansas City judgment convicted on an indictment which covered the sale of grape juice "for use by the purchaser in the unlawful manufacture of wine."

Future sales by Fruit Industries will be limited to the wholesale distribution of juices and concentrates to grocery stores and other established merchandising agencies.

Conn's decision was announced after a conference with Mabel Walker Willebrandt, counsel for the California grape growers, whose association with the enterprise after her resignation as Assistant Attorney General in 1929, is credited with having steered grape juice through the

CONSERVATIVES RULE CABINET IN ENGLAND

Party Has Eleven Members in New Ministry; Simon Gets Foreign Post.

London, Nov. 5 (A.P.).—Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald today announced a cabinet of twenty members that was hailed in government circles as a "truly national team."

Eleven members of the new ministry are Conservatives, four are from the National Labor party, and five belong to the two wings of the Liberals that are supporting the MacDonald government.

One of the most important posts—chancellor of the exchequer—went to Neville Chamberlain, Conservative and advocate of protective tariffs. This was a recognition of the preponderance of Conservative protectionists among the government backers in the House of Commons.

Personnel of New Cabinet.

Those looking at the government from the party view said, however, that Mr. Chamberlain would be balanced by the Liberal Walter Runciman at the head of the allied department of the board of trade.

Mr. Runciman's mind is open on the tariff issue.

The new cabinet:

Prime minister, Ramsay MacDonald (National Labor).

Lord president of the council, Stanley Baldwin (C.).

Chancellor of the exchequer, Neville Chamberlain (C.).

Foreign secretary, Sir John Simon (Lib.).

Lord privy seal, Philip Snowden (Nat. Lab.).

Home secretary, Sir Herbert Samuel (Lib.).

Secretary for dominions, J. H. Thomas (Nat. Lab.).

Secretary for colonies, Sir Philip Cunliffe-Lister (C.).

Secretary for air, Marquis of Londonderry (C.).

Secretary for Scotland, Sir Archibald Sinclair (Lib.).

Minister of health, Sir H. Hilton Young (C.).

First Lord of the Admiralty Sir Bolton Eyres-Monsell (C.).

Minister of Education Sir Ronald Mac Lean (Lib.).

Minister of Agriculture Sir John Gilmour (C.).

Minister of Labor Sir Henry Betterton (C.).

First Commissioner of Works William Ormsby-Gore (C.).

Secretary for War Lord Hailsham (C.).

Lord Chancellor Lord Sankey (Nat. Lab.).

Simon's Selection Surprise.

Perhaps the most surprising appointment on the list was the selection of Sir John Simon for the foreign office. It was well known that Lord Reading was willing to relinquish the post and it was expected Sir John would receive an important place, but there was no indication he would receive the foreign portfolio. Sir John is one of Britain's greatest lawyers and is leader of the "National Liberal group."

The retention of Mr. Snowden in the cabinet was generally expected. His post of lord privy seal involves no departmental duties and so his failing health will be no barrier.

As a cabinet minister Mr. Snowden must sit either in the House of Lords or the House of Commons and there is no doubt in any one's mind of his elevation to the peerage shortly.

In the position of lord president of the council, Mr. Baldwin, leader of the Conservative party, will be available for constant consultation with Mr. MacDonald, and the peculiar composition of the national government is expected to make such constant consultation necessary.

planes were safe and would arrive on schedule time.

Among these was the wife of a lieutenant in the Marine Corps, a pilot, who was due as a passenger on another plane. It seemed almost impossible for the woman to realize that it was not the plane in which he was flying that had crashed, but just as she seemed about to collapse from fear her husband's ship swooped gracefully down to the field and landed him safely almost at her feet.

George B. Taylor, the third Washington victim, had telegraphed to inform his wife that he was returning by train, so she obviously was not at the field to meet him.

After Mrs. Cox and the other woman departed for Camden, the airport officials succeeded in quieting the others who were at the field awaiting friends on other planes.

PAN-AMERICA COURT SOUGHT BY MEXICO

Wants Inter-American Labor Office Debated Also at Montevideo.

(Associated Press.)

Ambassador Puig Cassauranc, of Mexico, yesterday disclosed that Mexico had proposed discussion of a Pan-American court of international justice and establishment of an inter-American labor office as topics for the agenda of the seventh Pan-American conference at Montevideo next year. The suggestions are in the hands of a subcommittee on program which has been meeting at the Pan-American Union.

The Pan-American court proposal is not new. It was brought before the fifth Pan-American conference at Santiago, Chile, in 1924.

At Santiago there was a vote of 18 to 11 in favor of establishing such a court. The resolution favoring study of the proposal passed unanimously.

Even before that, President Roosevelt had instructed an American delegation to a conference in Mexico City in 1901 to suggest an international court of claims, to be called a "tribunal of international equity" and with "its precise purpose being to secure equity for those who are believed to have suffered injury in a foreign country for which there is no existing judicial remedy."

In its meeting last week, the governing board of the American Institute of International Law favored inclusion of the Pan-American court in agenda of the institute's session at Buenos Aires a few days before the Montevideo parley.

In its yearbook for 1925, the Carnegie endowment said:

"If the plan to establish the Pan-American court should prevail, the American republics would form a union possessing all agencies necessary for conduct of common business—a series of international conferences of a quasilegislative nature; a governing board of the Pan-American Union to conduct such business as the American republics should assign to it, and a judicial agency in the form of a Pan-American court of international justice."

FIVE PERSONS KNOWN KILLED IN CAMDEN AIRPLANE CRASH

ton fleet, was buried two feet in the earth.

Pilot Cox died at the controls, the rescuers said. His charred body was found in the pilot's seat, with one hand on the controls. The heap of charred bodies in the cabin of the plane were the remains of the other passengers.

Tried to Regain Control.

There were witnesses who said Pilot Cox apparently had tried to fight his ship into control. The plane, which had left the Newark Airport at 5:40, made its appearance over the Camden Airport about 6:30.

That Cox must have had difficulty with the ship before its arrival at Camden was evidenced by the fact that the plane left Newark at 5:48 and did not appear over Camden until 6:30, making a flying time of 42 minutes, whereas the ship usually flies the distance in 25 minutes. Its scheduled flight from Newark to Washington averages 68 minutes.

When the plane nosed over, it seemed as though the pilot had tried to right it. He seemed to succeed momentarily, but it then dropped like a plummet to the ground.

Thousands of motorists jammed the highways adjacent to the port. Rescuers who sought to extricate the victims were driven back by the seething heat of burning gasoline and flame. Had any of the occupants of the plane been uninjured in the crash, any attempts at rescue would have been hopeless. They were inextricably trapped in the blazing coffin.

Four Fire Companies Respond.

Four fire companies from Pensauken Township extinguished the blaze. Water was played on the wreckage until it had cooled sufficiently to permit the approach of rescuers. All occupants of the plane had been burned beyond recognition.

The bodies were removed to the Cooper Hospital, and then removed to the Camden Morgue, where an inquest is scheduled to be held today.

Coroner Melvin Kane, of Camden, who rushed to the scene immediately after the tragedy, said:

"The condition of the wreckage made it useless to attempt to determine the cause of the crash."

Chester Charles, Department of Commerce inspector at the Camden Airport, immediately began an investigation of the crash.

Unable to Account for Crash.

Officials of the line were unable to account for the crash. They were certain, however, that the plane was not on fire before the crash. Employes at the airport, on the basis of the report that the plane had been on fire before it fell, expressed belief that a gas line may have broke, spraying gasoline on the hot motor.

C. Townsend Ludington, vice president and general manager of the Ludington Line, issued the following statement shortly after the crash:

"I am sorry it happened, but I am at a loss to explain matters at this time. The plane was a high-speed ship piloted by the best pilot I ever knew. I don't feel that we ought to theorize as to what happened until the Department of Commerce completes its investigation. I am perfectly sure, however, that the plane was not on fire until after the crash."

Beat Hawks' Record.

Lucas had left Washington at 3 o'clock on a scheduled run and was returning with Cox from Newark in the plane in which the latter had beaten Capt. Frank Hawks' Newark-Washington record. His speed mark was established in September, when he made the flight in 57 minutes 23-5 seconds, including a stop at Philadelphia.

Usually the express plane does not stop at Camden, but it was being brought down to permit Ehle to land. Mrs. Ehle was waiting at the port to take him home, where his two children awaited his arrival to begin the evening meal. Mrs. Ehle became hysterical when the plane crashed and required the attention of a physician.

At the Washington Airport Mrs. Cox was awaiting the arrival of her husband. As was her custom, she drove to the airport to bring him to their home at Alban Towers. Other relatives of passengers also were gathered there.

Collins Off to Scene.

When word of the crash was flashed over the field teletype from the Camden Airport, Mrs. Cox learned of her husband's death. Officials of the line sought to console her.

Soon after the word of the crack-up reached the Ludington headquarters here, Paul Collins, vice president and operations manager of the line, left for Camden with five mechanics in a transport plane.

The fleet, low winged monoplane, which was running on the fastest passenger schedule in the United States, left here at 3 o'clock, landed its passengers at Newark and started back to the Capital. Two such trips are made daily, the morning plane leaving at 9 o'clock. In addition to the express service, other trips, averaging about two hours' flying time, are made every hour.

The fatality yesterday is the first experienced by the Ludington Line. One of its 10-passenger trimotored planes crashed in Baltimore several months ago, injuring the pilot.

The pilot had landed the plane at one of its regular stops. He noticed the ship was not running properly and he unloaded his passengers and went up for a test flight. In a forced landing his back was injured.

The Lockheed-Orion express plane was the only one in service for the line. Ludington officials said that the express schedule will be abandoned today. The hourly schedule of trimotored planes will be continued.

Ludington Line Starts Investigation of Crash

Newark, N. J., Nov. 5 (A.P.).—Gene Vidal, vice president of the Ludington Air Line, Inc., in a statement tonight said an investigation already had been started into the Camden crash of the company's transport liner which claimed five lives.

"The express plane, Lockheed Orion, lately acquired to operate this special service in addition to the hourly schedules, was of the latest and most improved design," he said. "It performed splendidly.

"As it approached Central Airport, Camden, it passed over the field at about 2,000 feet and circled to the left as it glided for a landing. Eyewitnesses report that as it swung in to the field from the southeast, the plane's lights were turned on. A few seconds later, they heard it hit the ground and simultaneously flames burst from the motor.

"A careful investigation into the causes of the accident has already been started, but information already obtained indicates that the fire did not start while the plane was in the air."

Mr. Vidal said that in fourteen months preceding the crash the line had operated approximately 10,000 trips on the New York-Washington run without an accident.

Repair Work Plea Made for Jobless

Cosmopolitan Club Is Told How Idle Mechanics Could Be Aided.

This week should be set aside as "mechanical improvement week" as a measure for putting more men to work in mechanical trades, Edward A. Rule urged at a meeting of the Cosmopolitan Club held last night at the Carlton Hotel. Mr. Rule is chairman of the club's committee on unemployment.

The extra two-day's work, it was pointed out, should be given to overhauling radios, washing machines, and other mechanical equipment. The workers should be obtained through regular dealers who know what men need work the most.

The speaker opposed the idea of hiring the casual street worker, stating that "We have a fine social service system in this city which takes care of these people with funds contributed by us through the Community Chest. Our task, therefore, is to give this extra work, to which we are pledged, where it will prevent the discharge of men who are good workmen and good citizens." Arthur J. Bergman, athletic director of Catholic University, followed this address with a talk on football.

300 Missouri Miners Stage Factional Battle

Higginsville, Mo., Nov. 5 (U.P.).—Three hundred miners of divergent factions engaged in a bloody fight today in which fists and stones were the principal weapons.

After the combatants had fought to the point of exhaustion, a dozen were treated for wounds. Several score others were not bruised enough to need the attention of doctors.

Soviet Cotton Dumping Seen.

London, Nov. 5 (A.P.).—A Reuter's dispatch from Riga said today that Soviet trading representatives were arranging to dump 1,000 truckloads of Turkestan cotton in the European market, storing it temporarily in Riga.

HOUSE DEMOCRATS PLAN SPOILS SPLIT

Both Northern and Southern Members Vie for Plums in Organization.

(Associated Press.)

House Democrats yesterday began a brisk skirmish for the spoils of victory, confident of a satisfactory division before engaging in the contest over organization.

The prize of floor leadership and a number of chairmanships of important committees is sought by both Northern and Southern members. The Southern States have ranking Democrats on 29 of the 48 committees, and with the entire membership behind Representative John N. Garner, of Texas, will take the Speakership, if the party is successful in the voting on organization.

Northern groups are supporting Representatives O'Connor, of New York; Ayres, of Kansas, and Rainey, of Illinois, for the floor leadership. The names of Representative Byrns, of Tennessee; Crisp, of Georgia; McDuffie, of Alabama, and Rankin, of Mississippi, have been indorsed by Southern groups.

Assurances that harmony will prevail were made by several members yesterday. The present differences are to be composed at a Democratic caucus December 5.

New York Desertion Denied.

Representative Ayres said, "Since the Speakership is going South, the leadership should go either North or West." He expressed confidence that the Democrats would present a united front to the Republicans in the organization battle and would win.

Assurances that the powerful New York delegation of 23 would throw its force behind Garner for Speaker were given by Representative Dickstein, of that State. This squelched reports of possible desertion of this important group in the event of dissatisfaction with the division of power.

Representative Rankin, of Mississippi, said "there will be no friction among the Democratic members over the question of seniority in case we organize the House." He said no delegation would demand more committee chairmanships than those to which they were entitled.

Republican Caucus Called.

In the meantime, Representative Hawley, of Oregon, from his home at Salem, yesterday issued a formal notice calling the Republicans into conference here November 30 to select a nominee for Speaker to succeed the late Nicholas Longworth, of Ohio. Hawley is chairman of the Republican caucus.

Campaigns for Representative Tilson, of Connecticut, party leader, and Representative Snell, of New York, for the Republican nomination, have been waged for months. The situation has caused the suggestion of several compromise candidates, including Representatives Mapes and Michener, of Michigan; Luce, of Massachusetts; Hoch, of Kansas, and Ramseyer, of Iowa.

In addition, the Republican Independents in Wisconsin laid plans to meet with other Independents here November 28 to formulate their demands on both the Republican and Democratic parties for liberalization of rules of procedure and enactment of their legislative program.

Kvale Support Expected.

Peavy said at Madison the independents hoped to obtain the support of Representative Kvale, of Minnesota, the one Farmer-Laborite, and Representatives Huddleston, of Alabama, and Collins, of Mississippi, to join the insurgent group and force both parties to listen to them.

Collins said here he had fought for a liberalization of rules of House procedure consistently, but had never allied himself with the Republican independents and had had no word from them.

The Wisconsin group also hoped to get the assistance of Representative Lovette, of Tennessee, who won on an independent Republican ticket last November. From Johnson City, Tenn., Lovette said:

"I am not in sympathy with the Progressives. I have already said I would line with the administration forces when Congress convenes."

Hollister Congratulated On Victory by Hoover

(Associated Press.)

Representative-elect John B. Hollister was congratulated yesterday by President Hoover on his victory last Tuesday in the election to the Ohio seat left vacant by the death of Speaker Longworth.

He chatted with the President for a few minutes, saying afterwards he came to pay respects.

SURPLUS OF WHEAT FACING REDUCTION

Chairman Stone Declares Weather Damage Will Cut Carryover.

(Associated Press.)

Chairman Stone of the Farm Board yesterday pointed to crop shortages and weather damage in wheat-growing countries which may go far in reducing the world surplus.

Controlling between 150,000,000 and 200,000,000 bushels, the board is keeping a close watch on the rising wheat market, which daily is increasing the depreciated value of its stocks.

Outlining what he believed to be the background for the ascending mart, the chairman said both France and Germany will need to buy wheat this year, Russia's production is reported down, as is that of Australia and Argentina, and dry weather is affecting winter wheat growing in this country.

Take Up Carryover.

These factors, he said, "may take up the overproduction of last year and put you back on an even keel." He added, however, that "all those things are in the offing."

On the basis of the 21-cent increase in December futures from the low of 44 cents the value of the board's holdings has mounted between $31,500,000 and $41,500,000.

Wheat sold or traded to China, Germany or Brazil was disposed of at then current market prices, or less than 50 cents a bushel. Besides those actual losses, the board is paying more than $2,000,000 a month storage charges.

To break even in its entire stabilization effort the board would have to sell the remainder of its supplies at prices considerably higher than 72 cents.

At present 5,000,000 bushels is being disposed of in domestic and foreign markets at current market prices on the day of sale. Any future foreign sales would also be made on the basis of prices prevailing then.

Grain Climbs Higher.

Chicago, Nov. 5 (A.P.).—Grain continued a stubborn climb to higher prices today, overcoming all obstacles with strong public support.

Independent of securities markets, holding the lead in what had been widely heralded as the "return to prosperity," foodstuffs the world over spurted sensationally and then weathered the usual technical reaction to close at substantially higher prices.

The grain pits of Chicago held the key position again and seethed with activity in one of the busiest sessions of the year. Wheat closed from ⅞ to 1⅝ cents higher, corn from 1⅝ to 2 1-8 cents up.

From all sections of the globe came word that the grain markets were watched eagerly by the depression-ridden world, that producers were figuring up their gains most of them holding on in hopes of still more.

Sees Prosperity Era.

Berlin reported the soaring prices of grain in the United States were regarded "in some quarters" there as the dawn of returning prosperity. The Berlin produce exchange was firm, but moved within a narrow range.

In San Francisco they figured that the farmers of six Western States had profited between $15,000,000 and $20,000,000 on their wheat holdings alone.

Nebraska's farmers could sell for $30,000,000 more than a month ago, but Omaha reported they were holding out for still higher prices. Only 76 cars were received today. Cash markets were higher everywhere.

Germany Seeks Tariff Cut to Replenish Wheat

Berlin, Nov. 5 (A.P.).—Agitation for temporary reduction in the wheat tariff, permitting Germany to replenish her depleted granary before the price of the grain goes higher, began today.

If the movement is successful, the result will be additional buying of wheat for German accounts.

Imported wheat at present is subject to a duty of 250 marks (about $59) a ton, on top of the cost of the wheat, which is 122 marks (about $28), C. I. F. Hamburg.

Ruby Laffoon Is Given 60,765 Majority in Vote

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 5 (A.P.).—Circuit Judge Ruby Laffoon, Madisonville Democrat, defeated Mayor William B. Harrison, Louisville Republican, by the greatest majority given a Kentucky governor in three decades, on the basis of returns tonight from 2,976 of the State's 4,178 precincts. The totals, Laffoon 325,126, Harrison 264,361, gave the Democratic candidate a 60,765 majority.

THREE ABLE FLIERS DIE AMONG VICTIMS

ton Line, having flown the Lockheed between Newark and Washington in 56 minutes, and the trimotored transport in 70 minutes.

Vernon Lucas, who was returning to Washington in the ship, had 3,200 hours flying time to his credit. He joined the Army Air Corps in 1919 when a student at Minnesota State College. He took up aviation radio work and served throughout the war in this capacity. Following the war he barnstormed throughout the Northwest and later was a pilot on one of the transcontinental lines.

Widow and Children Survive.

He was married and is survived by a widow and four young children.

Lucas had been with the Ludington Line about one year.

Only four days ago Lucas had played the role of one of aviation's heroes. He made the air trip from Washington to Camden in one hour and two minutes last Sunday, flying little Margery Cohen, 3 years old, to medical experts in Philadelphia.

The child had swallowed a bean in Orlando, Fla., and physicians decided it was necessary to take her to Philadelphia to obtain a bronchoscope to remove the obstacle. She was hurried by train and Lucas' plane to Philadelphia, but the operation was fruitless. Pneumonia had set in and proved fatal.

Mr. Smith served as a captain in the American Aviation Corps in France during the World War and had flown for several hundred hours.

Born in Tennessee, he was taken to Boston by his parents in his early youth and was educated in the public and private schools there. Later he entered the academic department at Georgetown University. While there he distinguished himself as a football player and member of the track team. He left Georgetown to enlist in the Aviation Corps in 1917 and was commissioned while serving in France. He was wounded during the war and confined to a hospital for several months.

Mr. Smith was well known from coast to coast as an advertising executive. He began his newspaper career on the Boston Herald and later became identified with the Zane Advertising Co. and while with that organization worked on newspapers in 30 different cities. For several years he served as financial advertising manager on the New York Times.

Was Advertising Director.

Mr. Smith filled the position of advertising director on the Washington Herald in 1929 and 1930 and then went to the advertising department of the New York American. He returned as advertising director of the Washington Herald last February.

Mr. Taylor, who was 53 years old, was chief of the laboratory of the Chestnut Farms Dairy and an active member of the International Association of Milk Dealers. His wife, Mrs. Rennie B. Taylor, said last night that he had worked at the dairy about eleven years. She is his sole survivor.

Mr. Taylor, a native of New Orleans, was well known in the dairy industry. He was chief of the laboratory section of the Milk Dealers Association, and was chairman of the committee on arrangements during their convention last year. In 1928 he represented the dairy at the World Dairy Congress in London.

The fourth passenger of the plane, Francis R. Ehle, who lived in Riverton, N. J., was president of the International Resistance Co. and vice president of the Durham Radio Co., of Riverton.

H. H. Denhardt Is Shot In Kentucky Vote Row

Bowling Green, Ky., Nov. 5 (A.P.). Henry H. Denhardt, 55, former Lieutenant Governor and Adjutant General of Kentucky, was in a serious condition here tonight from a bullet wound inflicted by W. K. Dent, Republican political worker, who claimed he fired in self-defense.

The shooting occurred this morning on a busy downtown street corner and climaxed a hotly contested campaign in connection with Tuesday's general election. Denhardt is prominent in Democratic politics.

RITCHIE DENIES USE OF IMPORTED LABOR

Make Detailed Answer to Charges Made by Federal Employment Head.

Special to The Washington Post.

Baltimore, Nov. 5.—After an investigation, Gov. Ritchie asserted today that he could find no basis for charges that outside labor was being employed on Maryland public works at very low wages to the detriment of available Maryland labor.

Raymond W. Bellamy, Federal director of employment for Maryland, alleged in a public statement that a survey of every Federal, State and municipal building operation in the metropolitan area of Boltimore disclosed that contractors were importing cheap labor and refusing to hire local labor, and that paving projects of the State roads commission were manned by cheap out-of-State laborers. He specifically stated that men in Colmar Manor, Bladensburg and Hyattsville were refused work in that vicinity.

Holds Marylanders Preferred.

"It is the policy of the State administration to give preference to Maryland labor whenever possible, and so I instituted an inquiry to find out the exact facts," the governor said.

"I find that so far as construction work at State institutions is concerned, the employment of local labor is practically 100 per cent.

"As to the roads, out of a total of 2,158 common laborers working on the roads in October, all but 165 were local men, and out of a total of 1,259 skilled laborers, all but 193 were local. This nonresident labor was either part of a nonresident contractor's permanent force or else was employed because local labor could not be secured."

"At College Park," the governor said, "two contractors are at work. One uses only Maryland labor. The other is a North Carolina concern, and its superintendent, timekeeper and two foremen are from North Carolina. They constitute this contractor's permanent staff. At present all other employes are local, although at one time one North Carolina man worked on the painting subcontract for a week.

Situation Near Washington.

"The Hyattsville district, which includes the metropolitan area around Washington, the governor stated, has 64 nonresidents out of 290 on road work. In this territory, he added, the work is being done by a contractor located just beyond the Maryland border, and the men in question have been brought into this State by them.

On other projects, he said, "the Hyattsville district has 21 nonresidents out of a total of 256 men. These had to be employed because of the impossibility of getting local labor, due apparently to work on the crops."

There are 67 skilled laborers on road work at Hyattsville, according to the governor, who said: "For the most part these men have been brought into the State as part of the permanent force of nonresident contractors, who are not requested to displace their skilled labor, as in the case with common labor. In other cases local skilled labor can not be secured."

When Washington Was Younger—No. 97

The front row, sitting down, from left to right are Miss Kate Schmid, now Mrs. James Tayman; Mrs. Elizabeth Schmid, now deceased; Louis Schmid, jr., now deceased; Louis Schmid, sr., now deceased, and Emma Schmid. Standing in the back row (from left to right) are Frank Schmid, Edward Sidney Schmid and Alex Schmid, now deceased.

Louis Schmid and his young wife came to the United States from Bern, Switzerland, in 1850 and in 1858 the family, then increased by two children, moved to Washington. Edward Sidney learned the taxidermist trade and when a friend gave him a live canary to kill and stuff, he refused to do it and kept the bird and trained it. This was the beginning of the pet shop, for he soon began to raise the birds and branched out to other pets, until today he is internationally known.

NAN BRITTON LOSES LIBEL SUIT VERDICT

Decision of Federal Jury Is Against Author of "Daughter" Book.

Toledo, Ohio, Nov. 5 (U.P.).—Nan Britton was not libeled in the book, "The Answer to the President's Daughter," a jury reported in Federal court today.

Miss Britton, who alleged in her book, "The President's Daughter," that President Warren G. Harding was the father of her illegitimate child, was termed morbid and degenerate in the defending book, written by the late Joseph DeBarthe. She had sued C. A. Klunk, Marion hotelkeeper, for $50,000 for circulating the book, which she claimed was a libel.

The jury took three ballots. Klunk was delighted with the verdict. He congratulated each of the jurors.

William F. Marsteller, Miss Britton's attorney, announced an immediate appeal.

The verdict ended one of the most turbulent trials in the history of Ohio Federal courts. Judge John M. Killits first excluded all minors, including Miss Britton's daughter, Elizabeth Ann, and then barred press representatives and the general public on the grounds that the testimony might "corrupt public morals."

In charging the jury, Judge Killits ruled that the alleged relations of Miss Britton to the late President had no bearing on the case. He ruled that there was no proof of their "friendship," and that the statements in her book were not to be taken as proven. The trial lasted eight days.

INGALLS TO ENTER CAMPAIGN IN OHIO

Assistant Secretary Will Begin Campaign by Plane Today.

(United Press.)

Assistant Secretary of Navy David S. Ingalls will leave here by airplane today to launch his campaign for the governorship of Ohio. He will be a Republican candidate in the spring primaries.

The 32-year-old chief of naval aviation is the youngest member of President Hoover's "little cabinet."

Ingalls will hold a series of conferences with prominent Ohio State Republican leaders, making flying trips to and from Ohio. He will retain his position here, at least until Congress acts on the naval aviation appropriations at the coming session.

"I know it will be a hard fight," he said of his approaching campaign, "but we will be in there to win."

Born wealthy, the great-nephew of the late President and Chief Justice William Howard Taft, Ingalls already has amassed an independent fortune. He was schooled at Yale and Harvard, interrupting his education to enlist in the naval air force during the World War.

He returned to college with three medals for heroism and the distinction of being the only Navy aviator officially credited as an "ace." Official records list six German planes to his credit.

Mr. Ingalls served two terms in the State Legislature, where he wrote and sponsored the pioneer air code of Ohio. He was appointed Assistant Secretary of Navy for Air at the beginning of the Hoover administration.

For the May primaries Mr. Ingalls' only opponent so far is Secretary of State Clarence J. Brown. The present Governor of Ohio, George White, Democrat, has been mentioned as a possible Democratic presidential contender.

The young Secretary rarely travels by any other means than air.

It is acclaimed on all sides by women who know, and who are accustomed to wearing good things that

NEW CLEWS FOUND IN CHESAPEAKE CASE

Bureau of Standards Uses Ultraviolet to Reveal Man's Initials.

A lead which may aid authorities in the identification of the body of the well-dressed man, found in Chesapeake Bay, near Point Lookout, Md., was established yesterday at the Bureau of Standards when the use of an ultra-violet ray light brought out the initials "H. E. S.," which had been inked on the lapel of the man's coat.

From a watch, upon which the initials "J. H. S." had been engraved, State's Attorney John H. T. Briscoe had hoped to establish the man's identity. The findings of the Bureau of Standards, however, indicates that the watch may have been the gift or property of a relative of the dead man.

The markings on the lapel of the coat were invisible to the naked eye or under a powerful microscope. This new clew will be used for development together with a New York Custom tailor's lapel in the man's coat.

A pair of man's eyeglasses may also be used in the search for relatives of the dead man. Authorities believe the man was thrown from a yacht. His body bore evidence of violence and had been weighted with lead to keep it from floating.

New York authorities are cooperating with Maryland officials in tracing the identity of the man.

Scientist Airs Baseball As Aid to Motherhood

By JOHN J. DALY

WHILE the world is looking for a way out of its difficulties, a learned professor, Dr. Edward Cornell, of Northwestern University comes forth with a panacea, the one stroke of genius that will set America ahead of all the nations. Says the professor:

"Many a child has been ruined for life by fumbling in handling while a baby. A course in baseball for girls, as an aid to housework, would improve the race. If girls knew how to handle a baseball, they wouldn't be as apt to drop a baby carelessly on the floor—or break their best china." These evils are rated on the same plane by the professor, who says that "playing baseball would give mothers better control, so I'm in favor of making all girls take up the game."

The idea of coupling baseball with the proper care and raising of children has never been broached before. It has possibilities, especially of discipline. A prodigal son, say, making a home run, merely because he has not made good in the world, could be thrown out at the home plate.

• • • •

A MOTHER with a bouncing baby boy on her knee would undoubtedly be a better mother if, when the baby boy starts bouncing, she were able to pick him up on the first bounce—"scoop him up" as a ball player handles a hot liner.

It is also conceivable that, under the professor's plan, Bible history could be taught easily at home, especially if there is a daughter named Rebecca to be sent to the well with a pitcher; or a girl named Ruth, to work in the fields, and all the little Davids striking out Goliaths. Yes, the professor has an idea.

As for the catching department the husbands would probably be, as the baseball players phrase it, "on the receiving end." They would at least get the bills for the uniforms.

• • • •

IT would be exceedingly edifying in the home to see the good wife practice all the arts she learned as a girl on the baseball diamond. Say, for instance, that a soup tureen were being tipped as it passed from the hands of the servitor to the head of the table, or that a gravy boat was about to upset. Fast on her feet, a nifty play on the part of the hostess, and the teaball would be shot to the kitchen. "My wife," the host would brag to this guests, "was shortstop on the '31 team at good old Kiwash."

The Northwestern girl graduates, when married, would undoubtedly lead the American Housewives League, coming, as they do, from the font of inspiration. Baseball is, after all, the natural sphere of womanhood, since it is related upon Biblical authority that Eve stole first. Of course, it was Adam who forced the put-out, caught in a double play, retiring the side; but that is neither here nor there. The idea is to give each girl graduate a diamond, and let the game begin.

Dr. G. C. Havenner Defended by Hege

Traffic Expert Urges Reelection and Deplores Emig's Attack.

Edwin S. Hege, traffic and market expert of the Federation of Citizens Associations, yesterday arose to the defense of Dr. George C. Havenner, who tomorrow night will seek reelection as president of the federation for a fourth term. The defense was occasioned by the attack the day before of Maj. Clayton E. Emig, delegate of the Dupont Citizens Association.

Lavishing praise on Dr. Havenner, Mr. Hege reprimanded Maj. Emig for his attack on the federation head and then explained that Dr. Havenner was persuaded to be nominated again by his friends. He also defended the incumbent president with regard to his opposition to the municipal airport and his association with local trade bodies.

Maj. Emig, in his open letter to the delegates, urged that William McK. Clayton be elected president of the federation.

LEAGUE'S MEMBERS RESIGN IN NAVY ROW

Split Follows Executive Committee's Support of Gardiner.

By EDWARD T. FOLLIARD.

A number of persons have resigned from the Navy League of the United States since its president, William Howard Gardiner, charged President Hoover with "abysmal ignorance" and "congenital pacifism" insofar as the American Navy is concerned, The Washington Post learned last night.

Distinct rumblings were heard within the league's membership opposing their executive committee's action yesterday in reaffirming these allegations as well as Gardiner's attacks on the whole economy program of the administration.

At the same time, however, the "Big Navy" propaganda organization has gained some new members as a result of the White House defi. A man from Detroit wired in, for instance, indicating his patriotism had been aroused, and asking he be enrolled upon receipt of his already mailed check.

Many Continue Support.

Influential members generally continued to support the league's constitutional purposes and policies, but it became apparent that many sided with Col. Henry Breckinridge, Assistant Secretary of War during the Wilson administration, in resenting the "unjustified and unseemly language" their chief had directed at the White House.

Breckinridge was the one member of the eight present at the executive committee meeting who voted against indorsement of Gardiner's now famous pamphlet.

Dr. David Jayne Hill, Ambassador to Germany in the Taft administration, and a member of the league's board of directors, had this to say about the committee's action:

"I stand absolutely by the statement of the executive committee of the Navy League as to the policy of the Navy, but I deprecate any language in Mr. Gardiner's pamphlet that might seem discourteous to the President of the United States."

Another member of the board, Mrs. James Carroll Frazer—who also is a vice president—echoed the views of Hill and Breckinridge.

Criticizes Gardiner.

Still a fourth, who would not permit his name to be used, thought Gardiner had gone too far when he assailed President Hoover's intelligence, although he, too, stood by the league as to armament needs.

Further, there was one slight indication that the executive committee did not reach its decision to stand by Gardiner without considerable discussion and bickering.

When the meeting at Chairman Walter Bruce Howe's law office on H street was over, the eight men who participated repaired to a back yard to pose for the talking news reels.

Reads Resolution.

Howe read the resolution, which restated the league's position, into the microphones.

The movie men then suggested that Gardiner say something. He stepped forward willingly.

T. Douglas Robinson, who served former President Coolidge as Assistant Secretary of the Navy, interposed, however.

"Wait a minute," he said; "if you say anything, we'll all make a statement."

Gardiner said nothing. It finally was agreed that he make an engagement with the news reels for this morning and read the same brief statement he issued yesterday.

Old Ironsides Departs For Capital Navy Yard

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 5.—The historic frigate Constitution, pride of the early days of the Navy, which has been on exhibition here for the last few days, weighed anchor shortly after 5 o'clock this afternoon, and under convoy of the mine sweeper Grebe, headed down Chesapeake Bay, bound for the Washington Navy Yard, where it is understood she will go into winter quarters before continuing contemplated visits to other ports.

Since her arrival here Monday the reconditioned old fighting craft was visited by several thousand persons, the majority of them school children from various points in Anne Arundel County, and others from counties on the Eastern Shore who made the trip across the bay on ferries.

Pantages Accuser Denies Misconduct With Dancer

Los Angeles, Nov. 5 (A.P.).—Emphatic denial of misconduct with Nick Duneav, her dancing partner, was made by Eunice Pringle today in the retrial of Alexander Pantages, vaudeville magnate, accused of criminal attack on the 19-year-old girl.

In answer to questions by attorneys for Pantages, Miss Pringle denied that she had spent a number of nights at Duneav's apartment. The cross-examination followed a ruling by Superior Judge C. S. Tappan that the defense had a right to inquire into the past life of the dancer.

sued his blast in the best of faith, hoping it would bring home to his countrymen and those composing the Government, "what I sincerely believe to be the very serious condition that confronts our country."

Group Not Informed.

The investigating committee, gathered under the same roof that sheltered a cheery luncheon attended by virtually all the league committeemen, was not informed of their action until they left the club. No comment was made by them, either.

The group which supported Gardiner included former Senator James W. Wadsworth, jr., of New York, a Republican; T. Douglas Robinson, Assistant Secretary of the Navy under the Coolidge administration; Nelson Macy, of New York; N. M. Hubbard, jr., railroad attorney, of Chicago, and Henry Cabot Lodge, grandson of the Massachusetts senator.

Breckenridge, in his announcement of dissent, said Gardiner's language would not "serve the best interests of the Navy or the Navy League" and should not be approved by such an organization.

There was no indication that the others had agreed with him, or at least that they considered the offense, if any, sufficiently grave to outweigh the value they saw in Gardiner's declaration.

UNITED STATES WILL PRESS PEACE EFFORTS IN ORIENT

league council. The United States, it was made clear last night, understands that the "commitments of the signatories of the Kellogg pact to resort only to pacific means in the settlement of disputes, were solemn binding obligations." Any breach of this solemn agreement by any of the 50-odd countries that pledged their national good faith to its maintenance could not be passed over with indifference by this Government.

Commerce Held Paralyzed.

Travelers from the Orient reported that the results of the Chinese blockade of all Japanese customs ports had virtually caused a situation to exist in the Orient with regard to Japanese commerce that has almost paralyzed its vital commercial relations with the surrounding countries. The greatest customer of the Japanese government is the United States, but immediately after the American balance of trade come the Chinese.

Added to this is the fact that the Chinese are the merchants of the Orient. Their influence transcends their own limits and their influence in all the marts of the Orient from Tsunan-foo to Saigon, in French Indo-China, is so considerable that the cumulative effects of the Chinese boycott have wrought immeasurable damage. This is believed to work as an almost automatic lever on the Japanese military penetration of Manchuria. Protests from Japanese merchants will eventually prevail, it is believed, over the warlike recommendations of the powerful group of jingoists that surround the emperor.

Japan's Territorial Claim.

Dispatches from Geneva yesterday reported the reiteration of Aristide Briand's demand that Japan abide by her promise made to the league council on September 30. At that time Japan promised to evacuate the occupied regions of Manchuria outside of the railway zone to which it is entitled by treaty provisions, as soon as possible. Such a promise, admonished M. Briand, retains its "full executory force."

However, Japan not only failed in its promise to carry out its evacuation, but subsequently some three weeks later, brought forward an entirely new thesis for retaining its control of northern Manchuria. This thesis broached a territorial claim to Japanese sovereignty in Manchuria which had hitherto remained undisclosed. The Chinese government had accepted the first four of a set of five conditions laid down by the Japanese and their attitude received the approval of the league and the league council for accepting. On the fifth point which concerned this relatively new claim to territorial rights put forward by Japan, the Chinese demurred.

Between the two dates there was a stiffening in the Japanese attitude which was coincident with fresh advances into Manchurian territory by the Japanese troops.

Secretary Stimson declined yesterday to make any comment on the situation there. The American observer, George Hanson, who has been in Tsitsihara observing the conditions there, particularly in view of any abnormal massing of troops, has returned to his post in Harbin without finding any incendiary possibilities of imminent clashes between the Japanese and the Soviet forces encamped there as guard for the Chinese Eastern Railway.

Forbes Sees Shidehara.

Tokyo (Friday), Nov. 6 (A.P.).—United States Ambassador W. Cameron Forbes called upon Baron Shidehara, Japanese foreign minister, shortly after his arrival here from Yokohama today and presented the American Government's note regarding the renewal of hostilities between Chinese and Japanese in Manchuria.

Contents of the note were carefully guarded owing to Washington's obvious desire for secrecy.

Tokyo considers the communication a "friendly representation."

Actual Warfare Begins.

Geneva, Nov. 5 (U.P.).—The Manchurian crisis has flamed into actual warfare, with heavy casualties to the Chinese forces defending the Taitsihar zone, the League of Nations was informed today.

A force of between 500 and 600 Japanese, supported by a squadron of airplanes, crossed the Nonni River, attacked Chinese troops under command of Gen. Ma Chang-Shan, and killed more than 100 men, Dr. Alfred Sze, Chinese delegate to the league, informed the council.

Sze demanded that Aristide Briand, as president of the council, notify Japan that these activities in Manchuria must cease, and that the Japanese government shall accept full responsibility for the operations of its Manchurian forces.

Bombardment by Planes.

The Chinese statesman notified Sir Eric Drummond, secretary general of the league, that a brisk battle took place at the Nonni bridge, which the Japanese had ordered the Chinese to repair. The Chinese had ignored the Japanese ultimatum, and sought to prevent the Japanese from accomplishing the repairs themselves.

Sze insisted that another engagement took place the previous day, when the Chinese troops were subjected to a bombardment by airplane bombs.

Japan's reply to Sze's charges consisted of notification that the Japanese intended to repair the bridge and that they would "take defensive measures if they were attacked," after which they promised complete withdrawal upon completion of the repairs.

The situation is considered extremely grave in league circles.

Precedent for League.

This is the first time in history that the league has been called upon to end actual hostilities in which actual battles, with heavy loss of life, have taken place. Previous international quarrels patched up by the league have never gone beyond the stage of skirmishing.

The Japanese military forces, Sze said, are supporting Chang Hai-Peng against the lawful government. The Japanese major, Hayashi, he said, notified the provincial government that Japan is determined to change the political situation in the province by force, "regardless of the League of Nations."

Briand Calls Special Session.

Paris, Nov. 5 (A.P.).—Aristide Briand, French foreign minister, will call a special session of the League of Nations Council to meet in Paris November 17 to discuss the Manchurian dispute between China and Japan, it was announced today.

Fearing the Far Eastern difficulty might develop into war, M. Briand, who is chairman of the League Council, decided to call the special meeting here, since duties in the French Parliament would not permit him to go to Geneva.

Soviet War Commissar Gives Neutrality Promise

Geneva, Nov. 5 (U.P.).—Assurance by the Russian commissar of war, M. Voroshilov, that the Soviet government will maintain absolute neutrality in the Sino-Japanese conflict in Manchuria relieved the anxiety of many League of Nations' officials tonight. It was recognized here that the only possibility of settling the dispute consists of localizing the conflict.

It was also felt that possible Soviet intervention was certain to involve the states bordering on western Russia, thus dragging all Europe into the controversy. Accordingly the Soviet war minister's statement was viewed as relieving a highly tense situation.

Drive of Y. M. C. A. Exceeds Goal Set

567 New Members of Central Reported as Campaign Ends.

Final returns in the Young Men's Christian Association's annual membership drive, revealed at a dinner of the 20 teams in the Central Y. M. C. A. auditorium last night, showed that the organization had gone over the top with a total of 567 new members. The goal had been put at 500.

The workers were congratulated by Huston Thompson, president of the Washington Y. M. C. A., and other officials of the organization. Ed Morton Willis, of the special enrollment committee, awarded prizes to the workers who had distinguished themselves.

A resolution was adopted voicing the association's regret at the illness of Dr. William Knowles Cooper, of the board of managers, who is a patient at the Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital. A rising tribute was paid to the memory of the late Dr. Homer J. Councilor, an active worker in past campaigns.

Membership emblems will be awarded at a meeting of the membership organization next week.

H. G. Wells Ill With Cold.

New York, Nov. 5 (A.P.).—Suffering from a cold and fatigue, H. G. Wells, British novelist, was under a doctor's care today. His publishers announced, however, that he expects to leave for Chicago tomorrow afternoon to fulfill engagements in the West.

SNOW HILL WARNS LABOR DEFENSE AIDS

Party, Beaten by Mob, Told to Stay Away From Murder Trial.

Snow Hill, Md., Nov. 5 (A.P.).—Peace in this little Worcester County town tonight rested, officials said, on action of representatives of the International Labor Defense League.

County authorities contented themselves with a warning to the league to keep out of the county, and moved to bring the case of Yuel Lee, confessed Negro slayer of Green Davis, his wife and two daughters, into court tomorrow.

Gov. Albert C. Ritchie today declined to take a hand in the case at the request of Louis Berger, secretary of the Maryland Branch of the International League, who demanded that State troops be sent to maintain order and protect Bernard Ades, an attorney for the league, which has voluntarily interested itself in Lee's defense.

League Party to Return.

Ades, with Oscar Rabowsky, his secretary, and Helen Mays, his woman "protector," remained adamant in their statements they would return here from Baltimore tomorrow when Judge Joseph L. Bailey, of circuit court, has called the case before him. Yesterday they were beaten by a mob and left town.

Warnings to the Defense League to stay out of the county were sounded by Gov. Ritchie, Judge Bailey and Mayor J. O. Byrd of Snow Hill. All three issued statements in which they blamed yesterday's disturbance on actions of the league representatives.

Berger countered with a threat to march the league's entire Maryland membership into the county to protect their representatives by force, if necessary.

Mayor Byrd tonight said he had been given fifteen State troopers from the Salisbury substation to patrol the roads leading into the town. Any person not having a satisfactory explanation for his presence would be arrested, he said, and held until after the case is disposed of tomorrow.

Ades Volunteers Service.

Ades entered the case as voluntary counsel for Lee, who has been in the Baltimore Jail for safe keeping after three mob attempts to gain possession of him had failed. F. Leonard Wailes, Salisbury, was appointed by Judge Bailey to defend Lee.

Judge Bailey today declared Ades had no standing before the court.

"He has no business here in the first place," the jurist said. "No representative of an organization like that has any standing in court."

A charge of carrying a concealed deadly weapon, filed against the Mays woman, after a fully loaded pistol was found in her possession during the near-riot yesterday, also is scheduled for disposal tomorrow. She is free under $500 bail.

The mayor promised that the Negro would be given a fair and impartial trial, if Ades and his companions stayed away. If they did not stay away, he said, they "would be tended to. I advise them to stay home."

Any preliminary motions will have to be disposed of before the actual trial can be started. Officials said they were preparing to bring Lee here from the Baltimore Jail for the court session tomorrow.

Merchants Lend Support To Santa Claus Lane

More than 75 per cent of the merchants on Fourteenth street northwest between Florida avenue and K street have agreed to decorate their stores and support the "Santa Claus Lane" Christmas campaign, the Central Business Men's Association was told at its regular meeting yesterday.

Guest speaker at the meeting was Howard M. Barlow, master of aeronautical engineering, who invited the business men to the aviation movies tonight at the Wardman Park Theater. Mr. Barlow pointed out that aviation was valuable to the business man as an investment, as a market for goods and as a quick means of transportation.

ROYAL PAIR GREET GANDHI IN PALACE

that his costume was the same as that he affected when he began his famous salt march to the sea, eighteen months ago, instituting a far-reaching campaign of civil disobedience to the authority of the British crown.

Nevertheless, Gandhi was genial and pleasant, and none would have known that in his brilliant brain were any thoughts of rebellion against the Emperor of India.

From Gandhi's waist, at the end of a cotton string, dangled the cheap silver watch which always forms another distinctive item of the mahatma's dress, and his twinkling eyes were set off, as usual, by steel-rimmed glasses.

Mrs. Naidu was clothed in a brightly colored Indian costume, while Desai appeared in white duck.

The mahatma was met formally by the lord chamberlain upon his arrival at the palace. He was not required to show the official invitation, as were other guests, for there was no doubt as to his identity.

The lord chamberlain strode beside him through the drawing room and surrendered him to the social secretary of the round table conference, who introduced him to their majesties. Later, when Gandhi was asked what he and the king talked about, he declined to reply.

"I would consider it most undignified," he said, "to disclose what his majesty and I had to say."

Gandhi's entire visit consumed only 35 minutes. At its conclusion it was recalled that this is not the first time the Indian leader has met King George and Queen Mary.

Thirty-one years ago, when their majesties visited South Africa, as the Duke and Duchess of York, Gandhi was practicing law at Durban, and it fell to his lot to read the address of welcome, in which he expressed the "loyalty of the Indian community."

On that occasion, however, Gandhi wore Western dress. And there were no thoughts of civil disobedience in his mind.

Women to Hear Lecture.

Rum Raid Brings Arrest Of Former Policeman

Joseph De Palma, former policeman attached to the headquarters liquor squad, was arrested last night at his home, 3000 Connecticut avenue northwest, on a charge of illegal possession of intoxicants. The janitor of the place, Carl Thomas, colored, and his wife, Hazel, were held as witnesses.

Detective M. K. Reading and Pvt. C. C. Brown, of the Fourteenth Precinct, said they answered a complaint at the Connecticut avenue address and walked in on De Palma as he was mixing gin in the janitor's quarters. The police said they found two and a half gallons of alcohol and 102 bottles of beer. De Palma was dismissed from the Police Department when he failed to report at the Tenth Precinct after being transferred from the Fourteenth.

WOLFENDEN IS HELD IN MILLER SLAYINGS

Manassas Farmer Charged With Triple Murder at Kopp, Va.

Special to The Washington Post.

Manassas, Va., Nov. 5.—Walter W. Wolfenden, 46-year-old farmer, was ordered held for the grand jury at a magistrate's hearing today, of charges against him in the triple murder of the family of Goodwin Miller, his wife and child, near Kopp, Va.

The chief witness for the prosecution was Joseph Wolfenden, nephew of the defendant, who testified his uncle was away from home on the night that the Goodwin family was murdered and their home burned.

Wolfenden was held at the Manassas Jail in default of $5,000 bond placed upon him by Justice of the Peace Thomas H. Cobb. The case will be considered by the Prince William County grand jury which meets in December.

The contention of the prosecution is that Wolfenden murdered the Millers to obtain $740 insurance which had been assigned to him on the life of Miller. Ben F. Hoover, a prosecution witness, testified Wolfenden had once asked him whether human bones would burn and whether the remains of charred bodies could be identified as those of white or colored persons.

He also said Wolfenden had once told him that Mrs. Annie Downs, a sister of J. J. Murphy, president of the Manassas Law and Order League, would be found burned to death some day unless she stopped reporting stills in the neighborhood.

J. M. Alridge, an insurance agent of Fredericksburg, Va., told the court he had paid Wolfenden $740, double indemnity on a $370 life insurance policy on the life of Miller, upon which Wolfenden had paid premiums. The policy was taken out by Miller in 1928 and later assigned to Wolfenden. The prosecution contends the signatures of Miller on the assignment of the policy are forgeries.

Raymond Miller, brother of the dead man, said he heard a shot near his brother's home on the night of the murder. A few days before his death, Miller said, his brother had collected about $100 on his war service bonus.

RALPH CAPONE JOINS HIS BROTHER IN JAIL

Surrenders to Begin Serving 3-Year Term in Violation of Income Tax Laws.

Chicago, Nov. 5 (A.P.).—Brother Ralph and Brother Al, the two Leavenworth-bound Capones, were lodged in the same jail here tonight.

Ralph surrendered to the Federal authorities this afternoon to begin serving his three-year penitentiary term for violating the income tax laws.

"Scarface Al," the younger and the more notorious, has spent twelve days in the jail while his attorneys decide whether he shall remain there or begin serving an eleven-year sentence at Leavenworth for a similar breach against the Government.

Like Brother Al, whose smile was changed to a scowl by the weight of his sentence and a $50,000 fine, Ralph snarled and cursed as the barred gates of the jail clanged behind him.

He yelled oaths at photographers and called on jail authorities to throw them out.

Capone's clothes were a sharp contrast with the usual sartorial elegance of himself and his younger brother, "Scarface Al." His black top coat was shabby and his shoes were covered with dust.

At the Federal Building it was announced that Ralph would be transferred to Leavenworth probably Saturday and, should the writ of supersedeas granted by the circuit court of appeals be lifted from Al, he may accompany Ralph on the trip.

His appeal from the conviction turned down by the United States Supreme Court, Ralph walked into the United States marshal's office this afternoon just five minutes before the deadline set for the forfeiture of his bond.

Warden Monneypenny announced he would spend the night in the receiving room and would get his cell in the morning — removed from brother Al.

His wrath was directed at the photographers attempting to take his picture behind the bars. The effort to evade them unavailing, he hid behind a Negro prisoner and covered his head with an overcoat.

(Associated Press.)

The Supreme Court yesterday was asked to reconsider its recent refusal to review the conviction of Ralph Capone, of Chicago, for violating income tax laws.

The move, however, will not delay the impending commitment of the notorious Al's brother to the penitentiary to serve his three-year term.

The petition asking the court to reconsider raised technical grounds.

Gangster's Playmate Of Boyhood Murdered

Chicago, Nov. 5 (A.P.).—Salvatore La Verdo, playmate in boyhood days of Jake Guzik, Dennis Cooney and other gangland characters, was shot to death today in the Italian-American Club in Cicero.

Cicero police said they had no motive to advance for La Verdo's death, but said he had been engaged of late in the liquor traffic.

GIRL RESERVES' UNIT MARKS ANNIVERSARY

Songs and Dances of Five Nations Are Presented in Festival.

In commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of their organization, the Girl Reserves of the Young Women's Christian Association presented in the auditorium of Central High School yesterday afternoon an International Folk Festival, featuring songs and dances of many nations.

Preceding the festival Mrs. William De Witt Mitchell, wife of the attorney General, and a director of the Washington branch of the Young Women's Christian Association, delivered a short address lauding the ideals and achievements of the Girl Reserves.

Following Mrs. Mitchell's address was presented the colorful and melodious Folk Festival, featuring songs and dances of five nations, portrayed by a chorus of more than fifty girls selected from grade and high schools of the District.

Among the outstanding features of the festival was Martha Fisher's portrayal of the role of the "Spirit of the Festival," which was the opening and closing number of the production. Garbed in a dress of gold and floating a filmy scarf against a background of old rose and gray, she entranced the entire audience as she glided and pirouetted to the haunting strains of a Viennese waltz.

Following came five ballet groups, which presented the dances and folk songs of Ireland, Czechoslovakia, Italy, Hungary and Poland. The Polish group was featured by a solo dance by Thelma Carey, and a Polish love song, sung as a duet by Catherine Schofield and Beverley Squires. Following the duet, Martha Fisher swayed and glided once more to the stately measures of a Viennese waltz.

The United States Army Band, under direction of Capt. William J. Stannard, furnished all the music, while the chorus was trained by Miss Ethel Quisenbury. It was estimated that more than 1,000 persons attended.

Three Men Take $45 And Cider in Robbery

Washington police last night were asked to be on the lookout for three colored men described as having a taste for cider, who held up the Maryland Tourist Camp at Muirkirk, on Baltimore boulevard, about 11:30 o'clock.

The three took $35 from the cash register, according to J. L. Robinson, the night manager, who added that they took $10 more from his pockets. Before leaving they stuffed their pockets with cigarettes and took a watch from the counter and, taking the cider from a stand in front, they made their getaway.

Dr. E. W. Kemmerer Warns Nation Against Hoarding

New York, Nov. 5 (A.P.).—America's gold standard and dollar are strong beyond argument, so strong that hoarding either of gold or currency is foolish, Dr. Edwin W. Kemmerer, international money doctor, told the United States today.

Dr. Kemmerer, financial consultant to a dozen nations and influential adviser in the formation of the Dawes plan, in an address before the Advertising Club, warned that "hoarded money is always in danger of being stolen and it earns no money."

The United States has more gold than any other nation has had in all history, he asserted, making our financial strength so great that New York may replace London as the world's money market center.

Persons who doubt the strength of the standard are "timid" or "ignorant" or "envious," Dr. Kemmerer said, and those who express fear of a breakdown "have no justification whatever in the cold facts of the situation."

The recent gold losses of $700,000,000 "merely put us back to about the figure we had in January of this year," the expert explained. "The gold reserves of our Federal Reserve banks are still more than $1,000,000,000 above legal reserve requirement."

"In 16 months' time," he asserted, "our United States postal savings have increased from about $180,000,000 to approximately $500,000,000. Money in circulation is turning over very slowly, likewise.

"Demand deposits that are not moving are analogous to money that is not moving, namely, to hoarded money. * * * I can imagine few things more foolish than for any one actually to hoard gold in a country with such a large gold supply as that of the United States and with such a strong credit position in relation to the rest of the world.

"The hoarding of paper money in the United States is likewise foolish. All of our American paper money, in addition to the other assets it has back of it, enjoys the guarantee of the United States Government itself and our national government."

GOLD STOCKS GAIN IS FIRST IN WEEKS

Federal Reserve Statement Indicates Outflow Has Been Checked.

New York, Nov. 5 (A.P.).—The New York Federal Reserve Bank's weekly statement of monetary gold transactions today showed the first gain in gold stocks in the country for any week since Great Britain quit the gold standard.

The statement for the week ended November 4 showed a net gain of $20,889,000, strengthening the conviction in international banking circles that the outflow of gold from New York was ended, and that the movement may be reversed.

Gold receipts elsewhere brought the total gain in monetary metal for the country for the week to $24,000,000. In the previous week, the country had lost $49,000,000 in the yellow metal, as the world-wide scramble for gold precipitated by England's lapse from the gold standard continued at a somewhat abated pace.

The monetary stock for the country, as of November 4, and giving effect to the $24,000,000 increase, was $4,311,000,000, in contrast to the record level of $5,015,000,000 reached in mid-September.

The recent outflow of metal, while much of it has gone to France where bankers would feel it is not needed, has had a tendency to correct the maldistribution of metal to which some economists attribute much of the recent economic ills. Gold has been exported from New York in small amounts to such countries as Turkey and Portugal, which have not received metal from here in years.

Recent losses of metal from this country have merely canceled the gains since 1929, which Wall street had regarded as unwelcome.

Today's transactions were of negligible proportions. The amount of $415,900 was received from India, $1,353,900 was released from earmark for foreign account, and $6,000 was sent to Roumania, making a net gain of $1,763,800.

State Will Offer Dreiser No Guards

Two Officers Will Be on Hand as Observers in Coal Inquiry.

Pineville, Ky., Nov. 5 (A.P.).—Theodore Dreiser, the author, told newspapermen late today the plan of the committee of investigators he will lead into the Harlan County coal fields, perhaps tomorrow, is to "let the American people know just what conditions are."

Frankfort, Ky., Nov. 5 (A.P.).—Adjt. Gen. William H. Jones, jr., said today there will be no troops in Harlan County tomorrow for the protection of Theodore Dreiser's committee, investigating labor conditions in the coal fields, but, instead, two National Guard officers will be on hand as observers.

Gen. Jones said he believed it unnecessary to send troops.

ALLEGED SWINDLER IS SHOT BY WOMAN

Assailant Charges Often-Arrested Man Squandered $40,000.

Detroit, Nov. 5 (A.P.).—A woman who told police her $40,000 inheritance had been "squandered by a man who preys on innocent persons," came upon Lyness Tromley, 29, in a downtown broker's office today, whipped a revolver from her handbag and fired five times. Although all of the bullets found their mark in Tromley's body, he was not seriously wounded.

The woman, Mrs. Dorothy Hoffman, turned the revolver on herself after shooting Tromley, but the gun missed fire. She fell in a faint in the lobby of the broker's office, and, while hundreds milled about the doors, both were taken to a hospital in an ambulance.

Police said they found that Tromley, who posed as a financial adviser, had been arrested eleven times, seven of the arrests for obtaining money under false pretenses. He had never been convicted.

The officials said they found also that in the seven arrests Tromley's conviction had been prevented by Mrs. Hoffman, who gave all her money and pawned her jewelry to make restitution.

Mrs. Hoffman said she had inherited $40,000 and that Tromley squandered it all in four years. She said Tromley was "a sort of a racketeer."

"I only wish I had shot myself," she said.

Pending investigation, police withheld charges against either Mrs. Hoffman or Tromley.

Short Circuit Causes Fire at Women's Bureau

A short-circuited electric light bulb exploded last night as a matron at the Women's Bureau, Pennsylvania avenue and Fifth street northwest, attempted to adjust it, bringing several pieces of fire apparatus on the run, but resulting in little damage.

The matron, Mrs. M. E. Dalton, was attempting to fix the bulb on the third floor. After the bulb exploded wires in the ceiling started a small fire. Mrs. Dalton telephoned an alarm, bringing out five engines. There were fifteen women confined in the building at the time. They were all brought into one room by Mrs. Dalton. When the firemen arrived the prisoners gave one glance out the window and resumed a card game. The damage was slight.

Bob, Stock Promoter, On Stand in Fraud Trial

New York, Nov. 5 (A.P.).—Charles V. Bob, stock promoter, took the witness stand in his own defense today in his trial with Frederick C. Russell for alleged mail fraud.

The mail fraud charges grew out of the sale of stock in Metal & Mining Shares. Bob testified he took a seat on the board of the company after he had been requested repeatedly to do so by G. L. Johnson, president of Metal & Mining Shares, and others.

HOOVER ALARMIST, DECLARES M'ADOO

Son-in-Law of Wilson, in Book Published Today, Criticizes President.

New York, Nov. 5 (A.P.).—Herbert Hoover is criticized of having greatly alarmed the country during the war by "dire prophecies" of a food shortage in an autobiography of William G. McAdoo, Democratic Secretary of the Treasury from 1913 to 1918.

The son-in-law of the late Woodrow Wilson, in a book being published tomorrow, which he calls "Crowded Years," also says of Mr. Hoover:

"His chief distinction has been acquired in distributing free food to the Belgian people in 1915 and 1916—a celebrity easily won, I fancy, as I judge from long observation that the job of giving away things requires very little wear and tear on one's ability.

"After this accomplishment Hoover was appointed Federal food administrator by the President, and that started him on his road to the White House."

In another reference to Mr. Hoover, Mr. McAdoo tells how the administration during 1918 was keeping from the public, "for fear of its effect on the morale of the allies," the fact that there was only a two weeks' supply of food left in England and that rations had been reduced all over Europe."

"About the time conditions began to improve, through the work of the railroad administration," Mr. McAdoo writes, "Hoover gave an astonishing interview."

After declaring the interview alarmed the country, Mr. McAdoo says:

"No doubt his (Hoover's) statement was promptly communicated to Germany through the secret news service of our enemies, and gave comfort to their waning hopes."

Then he relates that after an unsatisfactory exchange of communications, Hoover appeared at his office with "his legal adviser, Mr. Glasgow, of Philadelphia."

"Glasgow did all the talking," Mr. McAdoo writes. "Hoover sat with downcast eyes, like a diffident schoolboy. Beyond the greeting when he came in and his good-bye, I do not recall that he had anything to say. Glasgow told me, on Hoover's behalf, * * * that Mr. Hoover regretted his statement."

Mr. McAdoo says he told the attorney Mr. Hoover should make his complaints to the proper authorities and not to the public.

Grant Is Releasing Per Diem Workers

150 Recently Dismissed and 75 More Will Go in Month.

The Office of Public Buildings and Public Parks has dismissed temporarily about 150 per diem workers within the last few weeks and intends to cut off another 75 in a month, it was disclosed yesterday. The men will not be employed again until next spring.

Officials explained that they had hoped to keep these men at work during the greater part of the winter on highway improvement and construction jobs, but Comptroller General McCarl has ruled that the $100,000 appropriated for building roads in the Mall may not be used to pay per diem workers. The road building, he said, will have to be done by contract.

Lieut. Col. U. S. Grant 3d, director, announced earlier this week that he did not deem it wise to put part of his laborers on a part-time basis, as the District Commissioners plan to do, in order to retain those who would normally be discharged this time of year.

New Trial Sought By Abner Siegal

E. Russell Kelly, Counsel, Files Appeal Before Supreme Court.

Abner Siegal, attorney, found guilty last week of bribing a guard at the District Jail, yesterday, through his attorney, E. Russell Kelly, filed a motion for a new trial in the District Supreme Court.

In the motion, it was set forth that evidence was admitted over the protest of the defense, and that the weight of the evidence was not sufficient to support the finding of guilty.

Siegal was found guilty by a jury after a three-day trial. Harry S. Dean, guard at the District Jail, testified that the lawyer had given him $250 to change a card in the jail so that a man wanted in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., for murder, would have an alibi.

NAVY LEAGUE'S BLUNDER.

The executive committee of the Navy League, by a vote of 7 to 1, with two absentees, seems to support the attack made by the president of the league upon President Hoover. The statement issued by the executive committee is vague and misleading, but it may be fairly construed as a refusal to disavow the insulting language employed by the league president. The statement says:

> The executive committee of the Navy League of the United States affirms its faith in the statements issued by the league's officials and welcomes any impartial and comprehensive investigation which will throw much needed light on the present conduct of American naval policy.
> To this end the Navy League gladly offers its records without reservation. Furthermore, it resolves to pursue the purposes and policies for which the Navy League was founded.

This statement is vague, because it does not specify that it assumes responsibility for the specific utterances of the league's president; and it is misleading, because it attempts to make it appear that the question at issue is an inquiry into naval policy.

President Hoover has said nothing to indicate that he finds fault with any one for expressing opinions on naval policy. The committee appointed by him to compare the statements of the league president with facts concerning the Navy has no authority to discuss naval policy or opinions concerning policy. There may be as many opinions as there are citizens of the United States. Every citizen has a right to hold and express an opinion.

The executive committee of the Navy League has made the blunder of failing to repudiate an indefensible attack upon the President of the United States—an attack that impugns his good faith and patriotic purpose.

No organization can assume such a position and hope to retain the confidence or respect of the American people. That the rank and file of the Navy League will approve of the action of its president and executive committee is inconceivable. Col. Henry Breckinridge, who dissented from the action of the executive committee, undoubtedly voices the opinion of the majority of league members when he says:

> In voting "No" to the resolution, I wish to record my deep conviction that Mr. Gardiner's statement contained unseemly and unjustified language concerning the President of the United States, language that will not serve the best interests of the Navy or the Navy League, language that should not be approved by the Navy League.

It is not a question of a big Navy or a starved Navy that lies at the bottom of this controversy. No dispute over naval policy is involved. The president of the Navy League has written and published a statement in the name of the league in which he maligns the President of the United States, and makes assertions which the President denounces as untrue.

The committee appointed by the President to ascertain the facts will do its work. One part of its duty is already clearly defined, without the necessity of any inquiry, and that is to rebuke the president of the Navy League for his insult to President Hoover. As to the dispute over facts, the committee can readily compare the statements made by the league president with the facts in possession of the Government.

The respect that is due the office of President of the United States, and to the incumbent of that office, whoever he may be, has been outraged by the spokesman of the Navy League, and he is now given aid and comfort by a majority of the executive committee of that organization. The inevitable result of this action, unless it shall be repudiated by the league itself, is to destroy the usefulness of the league. It will not command the support of decent Americans in its efforts to promote the welfare of the Navy so long as it attempts to justify indecent and insulting attacks upon the President of the United States.

PRUDENT TAXATION.

Congressional leaders are gathering in Washington prior to the opening session on December 7 to discuss fiscal legislation. Since July 1 the Government has spent $661,000,000 more than it has collected and another considerable deficit is in prospect for this year. An earnest effort will be made to bolster up revenue, probably through increased taxes, to keep the deficit during these hard times within reasonable limits.

There is an inclination among several members of Congress to promote a reckless program of new taxes. They see only the deficit, which is four times as large as it was at this time last year, and the increase of $1,000,000,000 in the national debt. On this evidence alone they are ready to stampede toward higher taxes to balance the budget.

The tax promoters ought not to lose sight of the fact that during the ten years preceding the depression the people furnished nearly $1,000,000,000 annually for debt reduction purposes. In normal times the present tax structure not only yields all the revenue that is necessary to operate the Government, but an enormous annual surplus. From a business standpoint the surplus billions that were poured into the debt fund should be regarded as a reserve to be drawn upon in periods of emergency. With a tax structure that raises nearly $1,000,000,000 more than is needed for current expenditures in normal times an increase in the national debt during a severe depression is no cause for alarm.

Instead of giving too much consideration to the current deficit far-sighted leaders will look at the numerous signs of business recovery. The restoration of better conditions may be regarded as certain. No boom is expected, but a gradual development of prosperity similar to that which has always followed in the wake of a depression. Even a reasonable revival of commerce, industry and employment will swell income tax receipts and reduce the prospective deficit to a much smaller figure than is now estimated.

Some temporary tax upon luxuries may be considered advisable to hasten the return of the Government to a balanced budget. A levy of that nature might not retard the business revival. But it is certain that the situation does not call for drastic new taxes. It is the duty of Congress to make the burden of supporting the Government as light as possible, especially when the people are hard pressed and industry is readjusting itself to new situations. Every member of Congress ought to be on guard against unnecessary and excessive taxes.

SCIENTIFIC ECONOMIES.

Creation of definite standards for American products through scientific research has become the most important function of the Bureau of Standards. Even in this year of depression the demands for this type of service have expanded both in volume and variety. It is estimated that the bureau's work is saving more than $155,000,000 annually for automobile users alone.

One instance of its service may be seen in the investigation of automobile brake-linings. As a result, the poorest brake-lining that can be bought today is cheaper and superior to the best that could have been purchased before the research was undertaken.

About ten years ago the automobile and petroleum industries were almost at swords' points. The declining quality of gasoline had compelled designers of cars to use more and more drastic measures to secure proper combustion. Finally, the two industries contributed about 10,000 annually to the bureau for an investigation of gasoline. The first problem was to find the most economical fuel. The result was a saving to consumers estimated at $100,000,000 a year. Further findings produced a gasoline suitable for winter, where formerly starting difficulties had been such that winter sales were seriously impaired. Starting in cold weather is no longer a problem. Research also caused the abandonment of fabric tires. The saving of gasoline from the greater effectiveness of cord tires has been estimated as $40,000,000 annually.

The most valuable service of the bureau is its specifications resulting from research into the characteristics and qualities of numerous products. Manufacturers endeavor to meet the high standards set up by the bureau. Consequently products are being improved as well as standardized. In order to carry out this plan the bureau has communicated with all manufacturers known to use the commodities covered by the 335 Federal specifications and 25 commercial standards. More than 15,000 replies have been received, expressing the desire of producers to comply with the bureau's standards. The services of the bureau, working as an impartial agent, are invaluable in the improvement and maintenance of high quality.

LEGISLATION BY BALLOT.

New York's constitutional amendments voted on at this week's election have attracted much attention because one of them involved a contest between Gov. Roosevelt and Al Smith. But the balloting on these six items of routine legislation has a unique interest of its own.

New York is afflicted with a charter of such ponderous proportions that amendments are necessary to change even petty details of administration. For example, welfare workers of that State object to the use of the word "charity" to describe the process by which indigent persons are kept from starvation and exposure. To gratify this whim it was necessary for upward of 1,000,000 persons to vote on a constitutional amendment that had already been voted on twice by the State Legislature. As a result of this red tape extending over a period of years New York now has a department of welfare instead of a department of charities.

Even the reforestation amendment, which involves the reclamation of land that is not suitable for agriculture, is a matter that might better have been decided by a Legislature with the advice of experts. It is quite probable that the division of votes on this question represents the prevailing sentiment for Gov. Roosevelt and Al Smith rather than informed opinion on the land question.

One other question the people were called upon to decide was whether a county system of assessing property should be set up in Westchester County. On this question only a small portion of the voters registered their opinion. No doubt a considerable number of those who did vote flipped a coin to determine whether their judgment should be "yes" or "no."

Legislators of New York must be overjoyed to find that the electorate sustains their judgment that the useless State census should be abolished. But there was no such clarity of vision on amendment No. 4, calling for the creation of another judicial district. How could the people of this large State know whether or not another judicial center is needed in some locality? An almost equal division of ballots on this issue suggests the extent of the voters' befuddlement.

Maybe New Yorkers make a sport of amending their constitution. Perhaps the voters find these riddles as intriguing as cross-word puzzles. But certainly the elected representatives of the people can find no pride in the fact that they are not trusted to substitute a word in the name of a department or to overhaul a county's assessment machinery. Some day New York may discover that it is expensive to have the Legislature pass on routine details and then ask a few million voters to guess whether it has done a good job.

It is feared that Russia may become involved in the Manchurian troubles. If the reds get mixed with the yellows it will make things look black for the whites.

Street car lines want to curb the taxis. The trouble now is that the street cars have all the street and the taxis have all the curb.

The "skip-stop" system is proposed for street cars, but pedestrians will continue to use the "hop-skip-and-jump" plan.

Is it possible to sign some kind of armistice whereby we will not hear so much about Cannon and "big shots?"

The abysmal ignorance committee will now prove that truth is stranger than fiction.

MANCHURIAN TRIANGLE

By RODNEY GILBERT,
In the New York Herald Tribune.

The fear has been freely expressed in Japan and echoed in other quarters that if China failed to cajole the United States or the League of Nations into adjusting her Manchurian treaty difficulties for her, she would throw herself into the arms of Soviet Russia. This would be strictly in line with two millenniums of precedent, for China has never fought her own battles. From the time that she first broke the power of the Huns by bribing one group of nomads to fight another, she has always found some one to extricate her from her troubles, or has gone down under her accumulated sins of omission and succumbed to conquest and alien rule. In this instance, however, there appear to be two reasons why Japan's fears of a Sino-Russian alliance against her are unfounded. The first is that, in China's estimation, Russian alliances come too high. The last one cost her a portion of Mongolia, as big as half of China proper, and a perennial Communist problem. The second and better reason is that Russia's arms are not open.

Close readers of the news will have noted that Leon Karakhan, Moscow's vice commissar for foreign affairs, has assured the Japanese ambassador that there is no foundation for the rumors of red army movements that have been distressing Japan, and that for various reasons Russia is maintaining strict neutrality in Manchuria. What M. Karakhan says for publication is not always what he means, but in this instance there are other reasons than his bare assertion for believing that Russia has no intention of meddling in the Sino-Japanese embroglio nor of giving China material or moral support. The best reason is that Russia's and Japan's positions in Manchuria are so nearly identical that neither can afford to see the other's undermined.

Two years ago the Chinese thought that they saw an opportunity to seize full control of the Chinese Eastern and its territory. They thought that the expulsion of the reds would not only have the moral support of the world, but that it would have the material support of Japan if trouble came. Trouble did come. Mr. Stimson made a futile gesture which both Russia and Japan resented, and Japan then looked coldly on while Russia spanked China. The Japanese attitude was appreciated in Moscow, and now that Japan's turn has come to resent persistent Chinese efforts to undermine her establishment in south Manchuria, the Soviet Union is fully prepared to adopt just as cold an attitude toward China's plaints as Japan did two years ago.

Something of Japan's temper, when faced with any sort of a challenge to her Manchurian interests, is revealed in the very bold line which the Japanese Ambassador at Moscow took in this dilemma. He virtually threatened a Japanese military occupation of north Manchuria if the Soviet Union seized the present excellent excuse of disorder in the north to occupy the Chinese Eastern Railway. According to M. Karakhan's latest statement, Russia has agreed not only to make no military move but to maintain strict neutrality. The adoption of this attitude, under what amounts to a Japanese ultimatum, will not be palatable to Moscow, however, and is therefore one which no one should be surprised to see abruptly reversed.

Waiting for Him.

POST HASTE.

Tammany has voted a Levy upon New York. It is nothing new.

No wonder the Japanese are peeved. Tokyo reports that Chinese troops fired on Japanese troops in Chinese territory notwithstanding the fact that the Japanese warned them not to do so.

There are other disappointments in connection with Democratic organization of the House, but think of the bitter pill that has succeeded the Progressives' taste of power.

And now the Democrats are also realizing that the divine right of seniority has about as much business in democratic government as a king.

The elections really must be over; the New York Herald Tribune has resumed its fight on the forward pass.

The fact-finding committee on Navy affairs will at least furnish an interesting prologue while we await congressional interpretation.

Al Smith is seen slipping into the negative role of Bryan at the Baltimore convention; he couldn't get the nomination himself, but he did block Champ Clark.

The amount of party argument that will be wasted in the next twelve months is appalling when it is considered that the election a year hence will be decided by a minority on the basis of 90 per cent business and 10 per cent politics.

It's hardly fair to razz a man for things he's not responsible for, but in the case of the new Governor of Kentucky, go right ahead with your lampoon, cartoon and harpoon; you can't say anything he hasn't heard a thousand times already in connection with the name of Ruby Laffoon.

As M. Briand again demanded Manchurian evacuation, Japan only extended her lines of penetration 100 miles yesterday.

There is some compensation for stay-at-homes that the most expensive trip in the world would not have led to any better fall weather.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

NIGHT TIME.

A little boy had played all day,
But when his mother said:
"Now, put your pretty toys away,
It's time to go to bed."
He stamped his foot upon the floor
And straight began to weep
And said: "I want to play some more,
I do not want to sleep."

Although a merry day he'd had
While romping in the sun
It troubled sore this little lad
To think the day was done.
And so he sat him down to cry,
With solemn face and glum,
And could not understand just why
The darkness had to come.

His mother dragged him up the stairs,
But all she heard him say
Was: "I don't want to say my prayers,
Or put my toys away."
She tucked him snugly into bed
And softly closed the door,
But still that weeping youngster said:
"I want to play some more!"

"I want to play some more!" Ah, me,
This is the common cry!
The happy days of luxury
Have fled and none knows why.
Now care in much the self-same way
It did when we were boys
Has sharply called us in from play
And put away our toys!

Will You Stop to Settle a Neighbor's Quarrel While Your House Is Afire?

By ROBERT QUILLEN

AMERICA has more problems than all of her statesmen seem able to solve.

That is true, isn't it?

If it is true, why should America try to solve the problems of other nations?

If a man can't make a success of his own business, can be improve the situation by telling other men how to make their business successful?

If you had the decision to make, would you commit America to the business of saving Germany?

It isn't a matter of saving her from bankruptcy, but of saving her from France.

Here, in brief, is the situation.

France has the strongest purse and the strongest army in Europe. She can impose her will.

Because she remembers her butchered dead and because she fears another attack in years to come, her will is that Germany shall be wholly and permanently crushed.

She will compromise on one of two conditions.

Germany must accept an arrangement that would keep her forever weaker than France.

Or England and America must pledge their armies and navies to support France if she is again attacked.

If you were France, you would require similar protection, wouldn't you?

Whatever you would do, under no conceivable conditions will France relinquish the advantage and safety she now has.

How, then, can America save Germany?

Only by persuading or forcing France to show mercy instead of prudence.

Why should America wish to save Germany?

For many altruistic reasons, perhaps, but chiefly because Americans have invested something over $1,500,000,000 in Germany. A collapse would endanger that investment.

Already the effort to save it has cost American citizens a quarter of a billion dollars more, for the postponement of debt payments almost inevitably means cancellation.

The more money Germany needs, the more her citizens will send abroad for safe keeping, thus increasing her need.

If you had whipped Germany to save France, would you save her to endanger France? Would you save one friend to endanger another?

Do you still wish to meddle in Europe's affairs?

PRO AND CON

Press Comment Upon Acts and Actors in the Great American Show, "Politics."

Entering a New Era.

Atlanta Constitution.

Good times and hard times are nonpartisan. Their effects upon the mass of the people are generally alike. They touch particular and general welfare without regard to politics. All parties take credit for good times and no party confesses to having hammered out the hard times.

All of us, Democrats and Republicans as we may be, stand cocked and primed to cheer for returning "Prosperity" as she comes around the corner. We can see now that the "buyers' strike" is weakening under the pressure of actual needs, and millions of the people are waking up to the rare and profitable opportunities they now have to stock up on commodities for the person, the home, the office, the store and the factory, including the farm.

Hard Fighting Ahead.

New York Herald Tribune.

Of course, the net result of the congressional elections was to make the election of a Democratic Speaker extremely probable. But there will be little Democratic enthusiasm stirred by this gain. Responsibility for the antics of the next House, thrice divided against itself, will be nothing for either party to yearn for.

These are the political facts as of November 3, 1931. Based on them, a hard close fight for the Presidency would seem to be the best weather guess for 1932. But a general return of prosperity would obviously alter the prediction radically. So might many other factors. Political weather, like real weather, is far too uncertain to warrant either much gloom or much elation over an event still twelve months distant.

Progressives Have Last Word.

Philadelphia Public Ledger.

While it is possible to attach undue significance to political elections in so-called off-years, the keen popular interest aroused by the few and widely scattered contests on Tuesday was fully justified because of their bearing on the coming presidential campaign and the composition of the next Congress. Although there has been much fine figuring on the partisan line-up in the new House of Representatives as a result of these bye-elections, the question was virtually decided a year ago when the sweeping Democratic victories put the insurgent bloc in the place of power.

Whether a nominal majority of one or two is held by the Democrats or by the Republicans, or the parties are tied, the self-styled Progressives will have the last word. Titular control by either major party will be an empty honor and an embarrassing responsibility.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Writer Thinks the Postal Deficit Is Caused by Abundance of Franked Mail—Suggests This System Be Abolished.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Postoffice Department deficit for the first four months of the current fiscal year amounted to approximately $65,000,000. From this report, it is estimated that the postal deficit for the fiscal year 1932 will approach $200,000,000. Instead of the deficit decreasing it is increasing.

Department officials insist that only an increase in first-class postage rates will wipe out the deficit. The officials seem to have overlooked one important point, and that is the question of franked mail. Thousands of pounds of this type of mail pass through the offices throughout the country every day, and it all goes through free of charge.

Instead of increasing the rates on first-class mail matter, the Government departments should be forced to share the burden. The expense would be divided among all the departments, and not rest solely upon the Postoffice Department.

An increase in the rates of first-class mail matter is merely passing the buck of this huge deficit on to the citizens of the United States. I do not consider it fair to make the people of the country pay for a deficit for which they are in no way responsible. C. C. PARSONS.

The Way to Rid the City of Beggars Is to Refuse Contributions—Majority of Them Are Capable of Earning a Living.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: For the past few weeks the number of beggars on the streets has been rapidly increasing. Some ask for car fare, others ask for the price of a meal, still others stand on a corner begging from all who pass. There is only one way to prevent the city from becoming flooded with beggars. That is to disregard their pleas for help, pass them by without giving them one "red" cent.

The Community Chest and Associated Charities will gladly handle all cases of distressed citizens referred to them. It is not necessary for any one to beg for the price of a meal. The reason for there being so many beggars on the streets is because people give them money. The beggars have an easy mode of making a profitable living. They are lazy frauds. LABORER.

Suggests That President Authorize Recruiting of the Army and Navy to Full Strength in Order to Decrease Excess of Unemployed.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It would be well for the President to authorize recruiting of the Army and Navy to full strength.

This in view of the many men now without employment, and especially because the Army and Navy will be able to secure very good men now, who will be immensely valuable to the service later.

In my 30 years' experience in the Army and National Guard, I found that the men recruited during the depressions of 1893 and later proved to be very valuable, as they were of a much higher degree of ability and intelligence than those recruited in fat years.

I would write to the President direct, but my letter would get into the hands of one of his young secretaries and he would never see it. WM. H. KYLE.

Wet Democrat Says Prohibition Should Be Subordinated or Party Will Be Beaten.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am of the opinion that the prohibition law should be modified in an effort to curb the lawlessness that has, as I think, grown up under the eighteenth amendment, but I would be the last person to insist that the next candidate for President be a wet, irrespective of his general qualifications. What the Democratic party should do in 1932 is to endeavor to select and nominate the very best and ablest man possible to cope with the many pressing conditions with which the Nation is now confronted. This can only be done by ignoring the one and single issue of prohibition. If only this one issue is considered, as the fanatical drys insist shall be done, then we are headed for another defeat, more overwhelming than was witnessed in 1928.

If to be a good Democrat or a good Republican means that one will "jump the traces" and bolt his party every time his particular pet ideas are not made the paramount issues, then my conception of party loyalty is all wrong. Neither the drys nor the wets have any right to demand any such procedure of either party, and the sooner these part-time Democrats and Republicans are weeded out of the parties the better it will be, not only for the parties but for the country as a whole. A DEMOCRAT.

Writer Indorses the National Antiweapon Association as a Means of Checking Crimes by Armed Bandits.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have been reading with very much interest the plan to organize a national antiweapon association, and I am very much in favor of this organization to try to abolish crimes, so many of which have been reported in the papers of late.

Often I have to work late at night and with so many holdups with pistols reported, I am nervous, and, therefore, heartily in favor of anything to make streets and home safe from armed bandits.

I, with a couple of my friends, am joining the National Antiweapon Association at once. CONSTANT READER.

Mrs. Hoover Training Her Voice for "Talkies"

(United Press.)

To perfect her voice for newsreel "talkies," Mrs. Hoover is having sound picture tests made at the White House. Mrs. Hoover has sound apparatus set up in the library on the second floor of the Executive Mansion. She spent nearly an hour before the microphone trying out her voice in varying tones.

From a study of the results of the experiment Mrs. Hoover hopes to be able to adopt a manner of speech and intonation best suited to the sound pictures.

Ohio Banker Confesses Misapplying $24,000

Cincinnati, Ohio, Nov. 5 (A.P.).—Charles A. Sheria, 48, Oxford, Ohio vice president of the Oxford National Bank, signed a confession today in the presence of United States District Attorney Haveth E. Nau that he had misapplied $24,000 of the bank's funds during the last five years.

Sheria was arraigned immediately before Commissioner A. A. Siemon and pleaded guilty of violating the national banking act. He was ordered committed to Montgomery County Jail, at Dayton, in default of $25,000 bond.

Alleged Head of Alien Smuggling Ring Seized

Chicago, Nov. 5 (A.P.).—Gerald Francis, alleged head of an alien smuggling ring with headquarters in Canada and the Middle West, has been arrested in Detroit, Murray W. Garsson, special assistant to the Secretary of Labor, said today.

Garsson, who conducted the raid on Chinatown and who has been investigating smuggling and deportation cases in Chicago, said Francis used airplanes to bring Chinese and other aliens from Windsor to Detroit and Chicago.

Many From U. S. Enter Canada to Seek Wealth

Ottawa, Nov. 5 (A.P.).—The flow of immigration between Canada and the United States has reversed itself. Instead of Canadians crossing the border to seek their fortunes, citizens of the United States are coming to Canada, statistics showed today.

In the three months, July, August, and September, no fewer than 4,181 Americans came to Canada to settle. Immigration regulations, which are being rigorously carried out, require that all of these new citizens must have enough money to tide them over a year.

Hoover Turns Down Panama Fishing Trip

(Associated Press.)

In the face of assurances that huge fish escaped his secretary on a recent Southern trip, President Hoover yesterday turned down an invitation to enjoy the thrills of game fishing in Panama.

Roy T. Davis, American Minister to Panama, extended the invitation. "I told the President," he said, "that Larry Richey, (the President's secretary) caught only the small fish in the family and that some of the bigger ones are still waiting."

NAVY LEAGUE'S BLUNDER.

The executive committee of the Navy League, by a vote of 7 to 1, with two absentees, seems to support the attack made by the president of the league upon President Hoover. The statement issued by the executive committee is vague and misleading, but it may be fairly construed as a refusal to disavow the insulting language employed by the league president. The statement says:

> The executive committee of the Navy League of the United States affirms its faith in the statements issued by the league's officials and welcomes any impartial and comprehensive investigation which will throw much needed light on the present conduct of American naval policy.
> To this end the Navy League gladly offers its records without reservation. Furthermore, it resolves to pursue the purposes and policies for which the Navy League was founded.

This statement is vague, because it does not specify that it assumes responsibility for the specific utterances of the league's president; and it is misleading, because it attempts to make it appear that the question at issue is an inquiry into naval policy.

President Hoover has said nothing to indicate that he finds fault with any one for expressing opinions on naval policy. The committee appointed by him to compare the statements of the league president with facts concerning the Navy has no authority to discuss naval policy or opinions concerning policy. There may be as many opinions as there are citizens of the United States. Every citizen has a right to hold and express an opinion.

The executive committee of the Navy League has made the blunder of failing to repudiate an indefensible attack upon the President of the United States—an attack that impugns his good faith and patriotic purpose.

No organization can assume such a position and hope to retain the confidence or respect of the American people. That the rank and file of the Navy League will approve of the action of its president and executive committee is inconceivable. Col. Henry Breckinridge, who dissented from the action of the executive committee, undoubtedly voices the opinion of the majority of league members when he says:

> In voting "No" to the resolution, I wish to record my deep conviction that Mr. Gardiner's statement contained unseemly and unjustified language concerning the President of the United States, language that will not serve the best interests of the Navy or the Navy League, language that should not be approved by the Navy League.

It is not a question of a big Navy or a starved Navy that lies at the bottom of this controversy. No dispute over naval policy is involved. The president of the Navy League has written and published a statement in the name of the league in which he maligns the President of the United States, and makes assertions which the President denounces as untrue.

The committee appointed by the President to ascertain the facts will do its work. One part of its duty is already clearly defined, without the necessity of any inquiry, and that is to rebuke the president of the Navy League for his insult to President Hoover. As to the dispute over facts, the committee can readily compare the statements made by the league president with the facts in possession of the Government.

The respect that is due the office of President of the United States, and to the incumbent of that office, whoever he may be, has been outraged by the spokesman of the Navy League, and he is now given aid and comfort by a majority of the executive committee of that organization. The inevitable result of this action, unless it shall be repudiated by the league itself, is to destroy the usefulness of the league. It will not command the support of decent Americans in its efforts to promote the welfare of the Navy so long as it attempts to justify indecent and insulting attacks upon the President of the United States.

PRUDENT TAXATION.

Congressional leaders are gathering in Washington prior to the opening session on December 7 to discuss fiscal legislation. Since July 1 the Government has spent $661,000,000 more than it has collected and another considerable deficit is in prospect for this year. An earnest effort will be made to bolster up revenue, probably through increased taxes, to keep the deficit during these hard times within reasonable limits.

There is an inclination among several members of Congress to promote a reckless program of new taxes. They see only the deficit, which is four times as large as it was at this time last year, and the increase of $1,000,000,000 in the national debt. On this evidence alone they are ready to stampede toward higher taxes to balance the budget.

The tax promoters ought not to lose sight of the fact that during the ten years preceding the depression the people furnished nearly $1,000,000,000 annually for debt reduction purposes. In normal times the present tax structure not only yields all the revenue that is necessary to operate the Government, but an enormous annual surplus. From a business standpoint the surplus billions that were poured into the debt fund should be regarded as a reserve to be drawn upon in periods of emergency. With a tax structure that raises nearly $1,000,000,000 more than is needed for current expenditures in normal times an increase in the national debt during a severe depression is no cause for alarm.

Instead of giving too much consideration to the current deficit far-sighted leaders will look at the numerous signs of business recovery. The restoration of better conditions may be regarded as certain. No boom is expected, but a gradual development of prosperity similar to that which has always followed in the wake of a depression. Even a reasonable revival of commerce, industry and employment will swell income tax receipts and reduce the prospective deficit to a much smaller figure than is now estimated.

Some temporary tax upon luxuries may be considered advisable to hasten the return of the Government to a balanced budget. A levy of that nature might not retard the business revival. But it is certain that the situation does not call for drastic new taxes. It is the duty of Congress to make the burden of supporting the Government as light as possible, especially when the people are hard pressed and industry is readjusting itself to new situations. Every member of Congress ought to be on guard against unnecessary and excessive taxes.

SCIENTIFIC ECONOMIES.

Creation of definite standards for American products through scientific research has become the most important function of the Bureau of Standards. Even in this year of depression the demands for this type of service have expanded both in volume and variety. It is estimated that the bureau's work is saving more than $155,000,000 annually for automobile users alone.

One instance of its service may be seen in the investigation of automobile brake-linings. As a result, the poorest brake-lining that can be bought today is cheaper and superior to the best that could have been purchased before the research was undertaken.

About ten years ago the automobile and petroleum industries were almost at swords' points. The declining quality of gasoline had compelled designers of cars to use more and more drastic measures to secure proper combustion. Finally, the two industries contributed about 10,000 annually to the bureau for an investigation of gasoline. The first problem was to find the most economical fuel. The result was a saving to consumers estimated at $100,000,000 a year. Further findings produced a gasoline suitable for winter, where formerly starting difficulties had been such that winter sales were seriously impaired. Starting in cold weather is no longer a problem. Research also caused the abandonment of fabric tires. The saving of gasoline from the greater effectiveness of cord tires has been estimated as $40,000,000 annually.

The most valuable service of the bureau is its specifications resulting from research into the characteristics and qualities of numerous products. Manufacturers endeavor to meet the high standards set up by the bureau. Consequently products are being improved as well as standardized. In order to carry out this plan the bureau has communicated with all manufacturers known to use the commodities covered by the 335 Federal specifications and 25 commercial standards. More than 15,000 replies have been received, expressing the desire of producers to comply with the bureau's standards. The services of the bureau, working as an impartial agent, are invaluable in the improvement and maintenance of high quality.

LEGISLATION BY BALLOT.

New York's constitutional amendments voted on at this week's election have attracted much attention because one of them involved a contest between Gov. Roosevelt and Al Smith. But the balloting on these six items of routine legislation has a unique interest of its own.

New York is afflicted with a charter of such ponderous proportions that amendments are necessary to change even petty details of administration. For example, welfare workers of that State object to the use of the word "charity" to describe the process by which indigent persons are kept from starvation and exposure. To gratify this whim it was necessary for upward of 1,000,000 persons to vote on a constitutional amendment that had already been voted on twice by the State Legislature. As a result of this red tape extending over a period of years New York now has a department of welfare instead of a department of charities.

Even the reforestation amendment, which involves the reclamation of land that is not suitable for agriculture, is a matter that might better have been decided by a Legislature with the advice of experts. It is quite probable that the division of votes on this question represents the prevailing sentiment for Gov. Roosevelt and Al Smith rather than informed opinion on the land question.

One other question the people were called upon to decide was whether a county system of assessing property should be set up in Westchester County. On this question only a small portion of the voters registered their opinion. No doubt a considerable number of those who did vote flipped a coin to determine whether their judgment should be "yes" or "no."

Legislators of New York must be overjoyed to find that the electorate sustains their judgment that the useless State census should be abolished. But there was no such clarity of vision on amendment No. 4, calling for the creation of another judicial district. How could the people of this large State know whether or not another judicial center is needed in some locality? An almost equal division of ballots on this issue suggests the extent of the voters' befuddlement.

Maybe New Yorkers make a sport of amending their constitution. Perhaps the voters find these riddles as intriguing as cross-word puzzles. But certainly the elected representatives of the people can find no pride in the fact that they are not trusted to substitute a word in the name of a department or to overhaul a county's assessment machinery. Some day New York may discover that it is expensive to have the Legislature pass on routine details and then ask a few million voters to guess whether it has done a good job.

It is feared that Russia may become involved in the Manchurian troubles. If the reds get mixed with the yellows it will make things look black for the whites.

Street car lines want to curb the taxis. The trouble now is that the street cars have all the street and the taxis have all the curb.

The "skip-stop" system is proposed for street cars, but pedestrians will continue to use the "hop-skip-and-jump" plan.

Is it possible to sign some kind of armistice whereby we will not hear so much about Cannon and "big shots?"

The abysmal ignorance committee will now prove that truth is stranger than fiction.

MANCHURIAN TRIANGLE

By RODNEY GILBERT,
In the New York Herald Tribune.

The fear has been freely expressed in Japan and echoed in other quarters that if China failed to cajole the United States or the League of Nations into adjusting her Manchurian treaty difficulties for her, she would throw herself into the arms of Soviet Russia. This would be strictly in line with two millenniums of precedent, for China has never fought her own battles. From the time that she first broke the power of the Huns by bribing one group of nomads to fight another, she has always found some one to extricate her from her troubles, or has gone down under her accumulated sins of omission and succumbed to conquest and alien rule. In this instance, however, there appear to be two reasons why Japan's fears of a Sino-Russian alliance against her are unfounded. The first is that, in China's estimation, Russian alliances come too high. The last one cost her a portion of Mongolia, as big as half of China proper, and a perennial Communist problem. The second and better reason is that Russia's arms are not open.

Close readers of the news will have noted that Leon Karakhan, Moscow's vice commissar for foreign affairs, has assured the Japanese ambassador that there is no foundation for the rumors of red army movements that have been distressing Japan, and that for various reasons Russia is maintaining strict neutrality in Manchuria. What M. Karakhan says for publication is not always what he means, but in this instance there are other reasons than his bare assertion for believing that Russia has no intention of meddling in the Sino-Japanese embroglio nor of giving China material or moral support. The best reason is that Russia's and Japan's positions in Manchuria are so nearly identical that neither can afford to see the other's undermined.

Two years ago the Chinese thought that they saw an opportunity to seize full control of the Chinese Eastern and its territory. They thought that the expulsion of the reds would not only have the moral support of the world, but that it would have the material support of Japan if trouble came. Trouble did come. Mr. Stimson made a futile gesture which both Russia and Japan resented, and Japan then looked coldly on while Russia spanked China. The Japanese attitude was appreciated in Moscow, and now that Japan's turn has come to resent persistent Chinese efforts to undermine her establishment in south Manchuria, the Soviet Union is fully prepared to adopt just as cold an attitude toward China's plaints as Japan did two years ago.

Something of Japan's temper, when faced with any sort of a challenge to her Manchurian interests, is revealed in the very bold line which the Japanese Ambassador at Moscow took in this dilemma. He virtually threatened a Japanese military occupation of north Manchuria if the Soviet Union seized the present excellent excuse of disorder in the north to occupy the Chinese Eastern Railway. According to M. Karakhan's latest statement, Russia has agreed not only to make no military move but to maintain strict neutrality. The adoption of this attitude, under what amounts to a Japanese ultimatum, will not be palatable to Moscow, however, and is therefore one which no one should be surprised to see abruptly reversed.

POST HASTE.

Tammany has voted a Levy upon New York. It is nothing new.

No wonder the Japanese are peeved. Tokyo reports that Chinese troops fired on Japanese troops in Chinese territory notwithstanding the fact that the Japanese warned them not to do so.

There are other disappointments in connection with Democratic organization of the House, but think of the bitter pill that has succeeded the Progressives' taste of power.

And now the Democrats are also realizing that the divine right of seniority has about as much business in democratic government as a king.

The elections really must be over; the New York Herald Tribune has resumed its fight on the forward pass.

The fact-finding commitee on Navy affairs will at least furnish an interesting prologue while we await congressional interpretation.

Al Smith is seen slipping into the negative role of Bryan at the Baltimore convention; he couldn't get the nomination himself, but he did block Champ Clark.

The amount of party argument that will be wasted in the next twelve months is appalling when it is considered that the election a year hence will be decided by a minority on the basis of 90 per cent business and 10 per cent politics.

It's hardly fair to razz a man for things he's not responsible for, but in the case of the new Governor of Kentucky, go right ahead with your lampoon, cartoon and harpoon; you can't say anything he hasn't heard a thousand times already in connection with the name of Ruby Laffoon.

As M. Briand again demanded Manchurian evacuation, Japan only extended her lines of penetration 100 miles yesterday.

There is some compensation for stay-at-homes that the most expensive trip in the world would not have led to any better fall weather.

William Gibbs McAdoo heads the new Latin-American Bondholders Association. Several countries will be delighted to hear that an organization has been formed to pay their debts.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

NIGHT TIME.

A little boy had played all day,
But when his mother said:
"Now, put your pretty toys away,
It's time to go to bed."
He stamped his foot upon the floor
And straight began to weep
And said: "I want to play some more,
I do not want to sleep."

Although a merry day he'd had
While romping in the sun
It troubled sore this little lad
To think the day was done.
And so he sat him down to cry,
With solemn face and glum,
And could not understand just why
The darkness had to come.

His mother dragged him up the stairs,
But all she heard him say
Was: "I don't want to say my prayers,
Or put my toys away."
She tucked him snugly into bed
And softly closed the door,
But still that weeping youngster said:
"I want to play some more!"

"I want to play some more!" Ah, me,
This is the common cry!
The happy days of luxury
Have fled and none knows why.
Now care in much the self-same way
It did when we were boys
Has sharply called us in from play
And put away our toys!

Will You Stop to Settle a Neighbor's Quarrel While Your House Is Afire?

By ROBERT QUILLEN

AMERICA has more problems than all of her statesmen seem able to solve.

That is true, isn't it?

If it is true, why should America try to solve the problems of other nations?

If a man can't make a success of his own business, can be improve the situation by telling other men how to make their business successful?

If you had the decision to make, would you commit America to the business of saving Germany?

It isn't a matter of saving her from bankruptcy, but of saving her from France.

Here, in brief, is the situation.

France has the strongest purse and the strongest army in Europe. She can impose her will.

Because she remembers her butchered dead and because she fears another attack in years to come, her will is that Germany shall be wholly and permanently crushed.

She will compromise on one of two conditions.

Germany must accept an arrangement that would keep her forever weaker than France.

Or England and America must pledge their armies and navies to support France if she is again attacked.

If you were France, you would require similar protection, wouldn't you?

Whatever you would do, under no conceivable conditions will France relinquish the advantage and safety she now has.

How, then, can America save Germany?

Only by persuading or forcing France to show mercy instead of prudence.

Why should America wish to save Germany?

For many altruistic reasons, perhaps, but chiefly because Americans have invested something over $1,500,000,000 in Germany. A collapse would endanger that investment.

Already the effort to save it has cost American citizens a quarter of a billion dollars more, for the postponement of debt payments almost inevitably means cancellation.

The more money Germany needs, the more her citizens will send abroad for safe keeping, thus increasing her need.

If you had whipped Germany to save France, would you save her to endanger France? Would you save one friend to endanger another?

Do you still wish to meddle in Europe's affairs?

PRO AND CON

Entering a New Era.

Atlanta Constitution.

Good times and hard times are nonpartisan. Their effects upon the mass of the people are generally alike. They touch particular and general welfare without regard to politics. All parties take credit for good times and no party confesses to having hammered out the hard times.

All of us, Democrats and Republicans as we may be, stand cocked and primed to cheer for returning "Prosperity" as she comes around the corner. We can see now that the "buyers' strike" is weakening under the pressure of actual needs, and millions of the people are waking up to the rare and profitable opportunities they now have to stock up on commodities for the person, the home, the office, the store and the factory, including the farm.

Hard Fighting Ahead.

New York Herald Tribune.

Of course, the net result of the congressional elections was to make the election of a Democratic Speaker extremely probable. But there will be little Democratic enthusiasm stirred by this gain. Responsibility for the antics of the next House, thrice divided against itself, will be nothing for either party to yearn for.

These are the political facts as of November 3, 1931. Based on them, a hard close fight for the Presidency would seem to be the best weather guess for 1932. But a general return of prosperity would obviously alter the prediction radically. So might many other factors. Political weather, like real weather, is far too uncertain to warrant either much gloom or much elation over an event still twelve months distant.

Progressives Have Last Word.

Philadelphia Public Ledger.

While it is possible to attach undue significance to political elections in so-called off-years, the keen popular interest aroused by the few and widely scattered contests on Tuesday was fully justified because of their bearing on the coming presidential campaign and the composition of the next Congress. Although there has been much fine figuring on the partisan line-up in the new House of Representatives as a result of these bye-elections, the question was virtually decided a year ago when the sweeping Democratic victories put the insurgent bloc in the place of power.

Whether a nominal majority of one or two is held by the Democrats or by the Republicans, or the parties are tied, the self-styled Progressives will have the last word. Titular control by either major party will be an empty honor and an embarrassing responsibility.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Writer Thinks the Postal Deficit Is Caused by Abundance of Franked Mail—Suggests This System Be Abolished.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Postoffice Department deficit for the first four months of the current fiscal year amounted to approximately $65,000,000. From this report, it is estimated that the postal deficit for the fiscal year 1932 will approach $200,000,000. Instead of the deficit decreasing it is increasing.

Department officials insist that only an increase in first-class postage rates will wipe out the deficit. The officials seem to have overlooked one important point, and that is the question of franked mail. Thousands of pounds of this type of mail pass through the offices throughout the country every day, and it all goes through free of charge.

Instead of increasing the rates on first-class mail matter, the Government departments should be forced to share the burden. The expense would be divided among all the departments, and not rest solely upon the Postoffice Department.

An increase in the rates of first-class mail matter is merely passing the buck of this huge deficit on to the citizens of the United States. I do not consider it fair to make the people of the country pay for a deficit for which they are in no way responsible. C. C. PARSONS.

The Way to Rid the City of Beggars Is to Refuse Contributions—Majority of Them Are Capable of Earning a Living.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: For the past few weeks the number of beggars on the streets has been rapidly increasing. Some ask for car fare, others ask for the price of a meal, still others stand on a corner begging from all who pass. There is only one way to prevent the city from becoming flooded with beggars. That is to disregard their pleas for help, pass them by without giving them one "red" cent.

The Community Chest and Associated Charities will gladly handle all cases of distressed citizens referred to them. It is not necessary for any one to beg for the price of a meal. The reason for there being so many beggars on the streets is because people give them money. The beggars have an easy mode of making a profitable living. They are lazy frauds. LABORER.

Suggests That President Authorize Recruiting of the Army and Navy to Full Strength in Order to Decrease Excess of Unemployed.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It would be well for the President to authorize recruiting of the Army and Navy to full strength.

This in view of the many men now without employment, and especially because the Army and Navy will be able to secure very good men now, who will be immensely valuable to the service later.

In my 30 years' experience in the Army and National Guard, I found that the men recruited during the depressions of 1893 and later proved to be very valuable, as they were of a much higher degree of ability and intelligence than those recruited in fat years.

I would write to the President direct, but my letter would get into the hands of one of his young secretaries and he would never see it. WM. H. KYLE.

Wet Democrat Says Prohibition Should Be Subordinated or Party Will Be Beaten.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am of the opinion that the prohibition law should be modified in an effort to curb the lawlessness that has, as I think, grown up under the eighteenth amendment, but I would be the last person to insist that the next candidate for President be a wet, irrespective of his general qualifications. What the Democratic party should do in 1932 is to endeavor to select and nominate the very best and ablest man possible to cope with the many pressing conditions with which the Nation is now confronted. This can only be done by ignoring the one and single issue of prohibition. If only this one issue is considered, as the fanatical drys insist shall be done, then we are heeded for another defeat, more overwhelming than was witnessed in 1928.

If to be a good Democrat or a good Republican means that one will "jump the traces" and bolt his party every time his particular pet ideas are not made the paramount issues, then my conception of party loyalty is all wrong. Neither the drys nor the wets have any right to demand any such procedure of either party, and the sooner these part-time Democrats and Republicans are weeded out of the parties the better it will be, not only for the parties but for the country as a whole. A DEMOCRAT.

Writer Indorses the National Antiweapon Association as a Means of Checking Crimes by Armed Bandits.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have been reading with very much interest the plan to organize a national antiweapon association, and I am very much in favor of this organization to try to abolish crimes, so many of which have been reported in the papers of late.

Often I have to work late at night and with so many holdups with pistols reported, I am nervous, and, therefore, heartily in favor of anything to make streets and home safe from armed bandits.

I, with a couple of my friends, am joining the National Antiweapon Association at once. CONSTANT READER.

Mrs. Hoover Training Her Voice for "Talkies"

(United Press.)

To perfect her voice for newsreel "talkies," Mrs. Hoover is having sound picture tests made at the White House. Mrs. Hoover has sound apparatus set up in the library on the second floor of the Executive Mansion. She spent nearly an hour before the microphone trying out her voice in varying tones.

From a study of the results of the experiment Mrs. Hoover hopes to be able to adopt a manner of speech and intonation best suited to the sound pictures.

Ohio Banker Confesses Misapplying $24,000

Cincinnati, Ohio, Nov. 5 (A.P.).—Charles A. Sheria, 48, Oxford, Ohio vice president of the Oxford National Bank, signed a confession today in the presence of United States District Attorney Haveth. E. Nau that he had misapplied $24,000 of the bank's funds during the last five years.

Sheria was arraigned immediately before Commissioner A. A. Siemon and pleaded guilty of violating the national banking act. He was ordered committed to Montgomery County Jail, at Dayton, in default of $25,000 bond.

Alleged Head of Alien Smuggling Ring Seized

Chicago, Nov. 5 (A.P.).—Gerald Francis, alleged head of an alien smuggling ring with headquarters in Canada and the Middle West, has been arrested in Detroit, Murray W. Garsson, special assistant to the Secretary of Labor, said today.

Garsson, who conducted the raid on Chinatown and who has been investigating smuggling and deportation cases in Chicago, said Francis used airplanes to bring Chinese and other aliens from Windsor to Detroit and Chicago.

Many From U. S. Enter Canada to Seek Wealth

Ottawa, Nov. 5 (A.P.).—The flow of immigration between Canada and the United States has reversed itself. Instead of Canadians crossing the border to seek their fortunes, citizens of the United States are coming to Canada, statistics showed today.

In the three months, July, August, and September, no fewer than 4,181 Americans came to Canada to settle. Immigration regulations, which are being rigorously carried out, require that all of these new citizens must have enough money to tide them over a year.

Hoover Turns Down Panama Fishing Trip

(Associated Press.)

In the face of assurances that huge fish escaped his secretary on a recent Southern trip, President Hoover yesterday turned down an invitation to enjoy the thrills of game fishing in Panama.

Roy T. Davis, American Minister to Panama, extended the invitation. "I told the President," he said, "that Larry Richey, (the President's secretary) caught only the small fish in the family and that some of the bigger ones are still waiting."

GREATHOUSE DIES; DEMOCRATIC LEADER

Ill for 3 Years, Indiana Man Was Secretary of National Committee.

Indianapolis, Nov. 5 (A.P.).—Charles A. Greathouse, Democratic national committeeman from Indiana, died here today, almost two weeks after he had undergone an operation for gallstones. He was 62 years old and lived in Indianapolis.

Death ended a three-year period of gradually failing health. Mr. Greathouse spent much of the last 36 months of his life in hospitals or sanitariums. Despite his illness, he managed to keep up with his duties.

From the time he became Democratic national committeeman in 1922 until today, Mr. Greathouse was secretary of the national committee. He planned to retire from public life at the expiration of his term in 1932.

Mr. Greathouse was active in preparing for the Democratic national convention in 1924 in New York, and again in 1928 at Houston, Tex. In each convention he worked untiringly for an Indiana favorite son's nomination for the Presidency.

In 1930, for the first time in many years, Mr. Greathouse was unable to give the political campaign his attention. He was confined in a sanitarium at Battle Creek, Mich. The widow and two children, Charles A. Greathouse, jr., and Harriet Greathouse, survive.

Mr. Greathouse had a picturesque and varied career. He was an athlete at Indiana University, taught a country school and put business methods into the management of the office of State superintendent of public instruction when he was appointed in 1908 by the late Vice President, Thomas R. Marshall, who was Indiana Governor.

Mr. Greathouse had large printing, banking and brokerage business interests. He was chairman of the Democratic State committee in 1917, resigning to accept an appointment by President Wilson to the Federal board of vocational education.

He was born in Posey County, Ind., July 17, 1869, and was married to Miss Ribeyre, of New Harmony, on November 4, 1903.

2,000 Postal Jobs For Yuletide Filled

11,000 Applications Have Been Received Up to Date by Department.

With only 2,000 temporary jobs to be filled during the Christmas mail rush and more than 11,000 applications received to date, local mail officials are presented with the unpleasant problem of constantly turning down unemployed applicants who are anxious to help deliver the Capital's quota of Christmas presents.

The situation has become so embarrassing to Postmaster William M. Mooney that he has called on the newspapers to help him tell the thousands of persons still in hopes of gaining temporary employment that the Postoffice simply has no more jobs to offer.

Congressmen and senators are being constantly beseiged with requests for aid from their constituents and friends and in turn invariably write Mr. Mooney a personal letter asking that he help them out. But the 2,000 local jobs have long been filled, preference being given wherever possible to unemployed men with families, and consequently postoffice officials can only give a courteous "no" to the requests.

Dr. Marvin Declares Modern Youth Safe

G. W. U. President Addresses Mothers Who Visit University.

The world need feel no concern about the youth of the modern age if the youth have been reared in homes containing a spiritual background, it was stated by Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of the George Washington University, yesterday in an address before the mothers of the freshman class.

The mothers, spending a day with their daughters in the classrooms and looking over the university campus, were welcomed by Dr. Marvin, who went on to say that "there is a liberty abroad and a questioning in matters of opinion that used to be considered authoritative. The youth of today want to differ; they want to think for themselves about statements not backed by actual fact."

"The only thing that need concern parents," the president continued, "is wherein the standards of youth's judgment are based. If the spiritual values of life growing out of the home have been firmly established, it doesn't make any difference where our sons or daughters go or what experiences they meet."

A capacity audience of more than 400 persons packed Barker Hall at the Young Women's Christian Association yesterday noon, when the Grand Duchess Marie of Russia spoke as guest of the Twentieth Century Club.

She spoke enthusiastically of her experiences in the United States and expressed a fervent desire to become a citizen and make her permanent residence here.

New Combat Airplane Goes 217 Miles an Hour

Paris, Nov. 5 (U.P.).—Jacques Dumesnil, French air minister, today revealed development of a new airplane motor which will drive a combat plane at a speed of 217 miles an hour.

The new motors accepted by the government, are types developed by the Hispano-Suiza Co., and called "super-compressed" engines. They creat 800 horsepower, and weigh only 1,000 pounds. France will build an entirely new combat fleet with these motors in 1932.

EVERY DAY IS WASHDAY AT THE Gas PLANT

One of the many unique advantages of gas is that as long as it is clean, there is nothing in it to "burn out" the cooking range, furnace or water heater using it. With clean gas and ordinary care, a gas appliance is good for a lifetime.

To assure long and satisfactory use of your appliances, we make doubly certain here in Washington that your gas is exceptionally clean—it is washed and scrubbed as carefully as a school boy's shining face.

As the gas comes out of the giant gas-maker, it is first washed by being forced through water. Then it is cooled, to precipitate any foreign particles. It is again washed in water. Next it is screened—forced through a series of staggered screens to clean it of any remaining bits of carbon. From the screens it goes through a filter which also dries the gas. The final step, just as an extra precaution, is a bath in oil.

From this last operation the gas flows to you, ready to use. No other fuel can remove the waste matter in this way. Gas, as you receive it, is ALL HEAT. There is no residue in it, as in other fuels, to pollute the air or to be cleaned up. Every particle of gas is directly turned into heat, so that your gas pipe actually delivers to you concentrated comfort, concentrated convenience and ease.

NEW WORK PLAYED BY RACHMANINOFF

Enthusiastic Audience Hears Master of Piano at Constitution Hall.

The first performance of a new composition by Rachmaninoff, master pianist and composer, is always a musical event of importance and the large audience at the concert given by that artist yesterday in Constitution Hall regarded Rachmaninoff's "Variations sur un Theme de Corelli" as the outstanding feature of his comprehensive program. The concert was under the local management of Mrs. Wilson-Greene.

Hearing it for the first time, it is hard to form a seasoned judgment on a new composition even of Rachmaninoff and yesterday's audience, while seeming to appreciate the composer's masterly playing, was rather cold to this latest production of his gifted pen. Undoubtedly there were portions of great beauty in the new composition, but it did not seem so distinctly Rachmaninoff as other of his works.

A veritable tumult followed Rachmaninoff's playing of his "Prelude in C Sharp Minor" as an encore to the final number, "Tarantella, Venezia e Napoli," by Lizst. This was what the audience had been waiting for and they told the composer pianist in unrestrained applause. After obliging with several encores he retired and the audience went home.

Mr. Rachmaninoff was in splendid form yesterday and gave vivid interpretations of works of the masters. His opening number, Beethoven's lovely "Sonata, Opus 81," quickly won his audience with its three movements, each of individual beauty and attractiveness.

Rachmaninoff is ever the finished technician, a brilliant intellectual of the piano and this facet of his musical genius had scope yesterday in Schumann's "Etudes Symphonique" and Liszt's "Etude Transcendante," where his virtuosity had full play and his musicianship was revealed for all.

"You needn't tell me —I know Camel is the fresh cigarette!"

FRESH in nature's way

CAMELS are never parched or toasted!

FRESHNESS and flavor in a cigarette trace right back to natural moisture.

If you overheat or process tobacco so harshly as to dry out all natural moisture you drive out freshness and flavor too.

Camel never parches or toasts the fine Turkish and mild Domestic tobaccos it uses—they are naturally smooth, cool, mellow, with natural moisture retained.

That's why the Camel Humidor Pack proves such a blessing to Camel smokers—it brings them a fine cigarette fresh to start with, and fresh to smoke.

If you don't realize what natural moisture means in genuine freshness and flavor, switch to Camels and see.

Try this mild, slow-burning, throat-friendly favorite for just one day—then leave it, if you can!

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

FRANCES M'DONALD

D MAIDS AND PROUD OF IT!

EAR FRANCES M'DONALD:

Do the men of this day ever consider what a decent young n is thinking as the hero goes gh his line? All the "trying-stuff, all the cheap, fresh, in-t antics he goes through to ain the girl's status?

m a well-bred, intelligent per-voted the "loveliest graduate" at ollege, but let that pass—except ow that I am not talking sour s. I have had lots of attention. I consider any man beneath my e who can not conduct himself man and a gentleman when ng a woman. The man who go into the field of experimen-n to know whether he is ad-ng a decent woman belongs where other than in civilized ty.

en I first left college I intended arry. Now I have changed my . For even the men who were respecting with me had been wise with other girls of my aintance. On two occasions men I accepted as friends and escorts nd had acted in a manner offen-to friends of mine. That let out so far as I am concerned.

m nearing the fatal 30—26, to act, and am not only reconciled e thought of being an old maid proud of it. If I have certain ards by which I choose my n friends, why not the same in sing men friends? A woman the morals of a tramp would qualify as one of my set, why a man of that stamp? I want no p, nasty-minded male messing my life, and if that means being ld maid I am satisfied. And I Mr. Mephistopholes and a few s get what I mean. Men make themselves disgusting to decent young women quite as often as girls disappoint men. And that is the reason for this particular.

"OLD MAID."

And Glad Girl says about the same thing—with trimmings:

"Listen, here, Frances McDonald, why don't you light right into these no-account sports who talk about how careful they are to try out every girl they go out with? What do they think the girl is anyway? I broke a tennis racquet over the head of one of them just last week—and it was his tennis racquet as well as his head. He was indignant at the injury to his old racquet, which he hastened to inform me cost 25. I asked him how about the injury to my feelings, which to me at least are above price. These miserable tadpoles nauseate me. I am fed up and sick of them. And at 27 I am proud to say I am definitely through and ready to be an old maid with pleasure. Imagine sharing your life with some person who has spent years going around having tennis racquets broken over his empty head. Let them wed on their own level. And let the decent, intelligent females band together and live their own lives as enlightened human beings should. Here is one girl who is an old maid by choice—and proud of it. GLAD GIRL.

All of which should give the Romeos some thought. For when the better type of girl decides that man must change, man changes! What ho, there, Romeo, is that a snow-white charger, that we see in the distance? And not surely a velvet cloak upon the ground awaiting fair lady's disdainful foot? Well-a-day and how the times have changed. 'Twas ever thus when fair ones turned scornful. On with romance.

Tree Planting Ceremony To Be Held in Suitland

A speaker from the U. S. Department of Agriculture will deliver the principal address at a tree-planting ceremony in Suitland, Md., this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. The 4-H Club, the Parent-Teacher Association, the Citizens Association and the Homemakers Club will participate in the ceremony, which is sponsored by the Homemakers Club.

Others on the program, in addition to C. A. Read, assistant horticulturist of the Department of Agriculture, are Nicholas Orem, superintendent of schools; the Rev. James T. Marshall, jr., Dora Smith, Mae Hugel, Billie Barr, Louise Payne, Wilton Hartman, Mrs. Clifford Jenkins and Mary Jenkins.

Jane Corbin Interprets the Mode

The flowing sleeves of this black chiffon velvet tea gown are lined with silver mesh, and the beaded motifs are in silver, crystal and jet. (Sketched in a New York shop.)

New York, Nov. 5.

As many people who know lots 'n' lots about styles predicted earlier in the season, as winter settles down to its stride, lovely ladies to whom evening wear is all-important, are turning away from period gowns and toward frocks whose formality is expressed by cut, material, trimming and color. After all, extreme frills and furbelows are as amusing as can be, aren't they, but very apt to get tiresome after a little? And naturally, puffed sleeves and bustles, harem skirts and such things were extreme, with the added disadvantage of being becoming to only the few!

So-o-o-o, the woman who buys her midwinter evening gowns looks first for the slender silhouette, the silhouette that has appeared for countless seasons, but which, because of its own grace and becomingness, is ever new. It's soft in the bodice and fitted snugly at waist and hip, and the fullness appears low in the skirt, which is, for today, slipper heel length, 2 inches from the floor. But the ways in which these general specifications are filled, the diversity of fabric and limitless beauty of trimming keep the silhoutte far from any hint of dull sameness.

Just now women are showing a great partiality for the extreme harness decolletage—the harness being very narrow straps of brilliants, colored or crystalline, arranged in many ways to uphold a very low-cut back. These tiny straps are popular, perhaps, because of their extreme delicacy and fragility that make many a man wonder how they ever successfully prevent disaster to many a lovely lady.

* * * *

Formality as expressed by black velvet is what most women are striving to attain when indoor tea hours arrive! Of course, there's nothing quite like black velvet to express this mood, especially when it's made up on the stately lines of the tea gown I have sketched today and combined with other such lovely materials. The diamond-shaped motifs, for instance, are beaded in tiny silver, crystal and jet beads and the flowing, split sleeves are lined with silver mesh.

* * * *

Don't you want to drink a formal cup of tea, too? Maybe you have other ideas about design or silhouette, but it's just about certain that you will decide on black velvet as the fabric to be used.

And if you wear jewelry with your tea gown, try to have it as appropriate as the brooch I illustrate today, which is of silver, strass and carved jet!

* * * *

Guess how long it took to make the loveliest nightie I've ever seen in my whole life! Just one-half hour! 'N' the nightie was more than a nightie, too. It attached two lovely sleeves and became a classically elegant negligee! Naturally, when I saw how little time it took and how flattering and charming the nightie-negligee was, it didn't take me long to figure out the hows and wherefores. 'N', of course, I was so pleased that I decided to let my dear public in on the secret, too. So-o-o, all you have to do is to sit down and send that stamped, self-addressed envelope off immediately to the Dare department of The Post for this week's illustrated leaflet. Just think how many extra special Christmas presents you can make at half an hour apiece!

Au revoir!

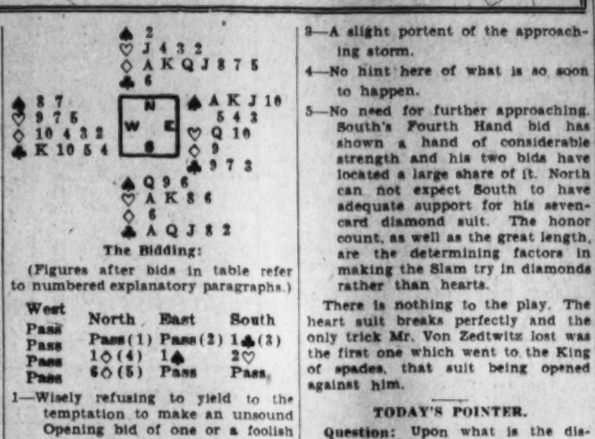
BIDDING FOR SLAMS.

WHILE it is probably correct to say that Slam bidding at Contract as practiced by many Contract players is a losing venture, because it sacrifices easily attainable games on the altar of Slam worship. It is equally correct that the bidding and making of Slams furnish the thrill that lasts throughout the evening. When you are able to so value your hands that you feel you have an even chance of making 12 tricks, you are entitled to bid a Small Slam. Often, in fact generally, in acquiring this information, there is a great deal of information exchanged between the partners, all below the game level. Other hands, however, lend themselves to almost direct Slam bidding, as witness the following example from the recent individual Masters' Tournament by that master bidder and player, Mr. Waldemar von Zedtwitz. Mr. Von Zedtwitz held the North hand.

West—Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.
East and West not vulnerable.



The Bidding:

(Figures after bids in table refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass (1)	Pass (2)	1♣ (3)
Pass	1◇ (4)	1♠	2♡
Pass	6◇ (5)	Pass	Pass
Pass

1—Wisely refusing to yield to the temptation to make an unsound Opening bid of one or a foolish pre-emptive bid.

2—East expects to show his strong spade suit if South opens the bidding.

3—A slight portent of the approaching storm.

4—No hint here of what is so soon to happen.

5—No need for further approaching. South's Fourth Hand bid has shown a hand of considerable strength and his two bids have located a large share of it. North can not expect South to have adequate support for his seven-card diamond suit. The honor count, as well as the great length, are the determining factors in making the Slam try in diamonds rather than hearts.

There is nothing to the play. The heart suit breaks perfectly and the only trick Mr. Von Zedtwitz lost was the first one which went to the King of spades, that suit being opened against him.

TODAY'S POINTER.

Question: Upon what is the distributional count based?

Answer: Upon the fact that a suit is presumed to be established after three rounds.

have a Clear Skin—

rich, red blood cells will help you . . . .

"I WAS determined to have a clear skin."

"Some one told me of S.S.S. * * * now I am so glad the last pimple is gone."

Of course you want a clear skin. Everybody does. It helps you win and hold friends. It makes for greater popularity.

Whatever treatment you may use for your complexion, remember the important fact that skin health depends upon the right number of red-blood-cells.

Skin specialists recognize that thin, weak, impoverished blood will not make for a clear, healthy glow of the skin.

More rich, red-blood-cells will help

A low red-blood-cell count often exhibits itself in one or more of the following symptoms:—paleness, quick fatigue, lack of normal resistance to disease, pimples, boils and general run-down condition.

A lagging appetite often leads to underweight and ill health in various manifestations.

You cannot be low in strength and be happy—let's be happy.

For generations S.S.S. as a tonic has been helping people gain New Strength, better health and happiness. Its successful record of over 100 years in restoring strength and vitality to the blood surely warrants your giving it a good trial.

You should know that S.S.S. has the distinct advantage of being composed of fresh vegetable medicinal ingredients in concentrated form * * * it is Mother Nature's formula.

Why not start taking S.S.S. today?—the larger size represents a price saving.

Builds Sturdy Health

Why you should be interested in your Blood Count

It is important to know that the red-blood-cells are the "ships" that sail in the blood stream and carry nourishment and oxygen to all parts of the body . . . they build and sustain—they also remove impurities from the tissues.

Whenever bad complexion or blemishes on the skin are due to a low blood count, or to a lagging appetite, the condition can be relieved or benefited by a course of S.S.S. If you are pale, or languid, give S.S.S. a trial. It may help you as it has helped thousands of others. It builds red-blood-cells. It is a splendid tonic.

(Upper) Microscopic view of healthy red-blood-cells. The blood stream should contain about 5,000,000 of these cells to the cubic millimeter. They carry nourishment and oxygen to every part of the body—they also remove impurities from the tissues.

(Lower) Weak red-blood-cells—only 60 per cent of normal strength—they lack the power to resist infection and disease or to rebuild flesh and to carry away the impurities. Such a condition is often responsible for body weakness, paleness, sallow complexion, pimples and boils.

Don't let them count you out!

Indoor—Outdoor Gardens

By JANE LESLIE KIFT

THE LANTANA AND HELIOTROPE.

The lantana has long been popular as a bedding plant, but until recently it has not been grown indoors to any great extent. Now people, judging from the lantanas which received prizes at the recent fall shows, are beginning really to appreciate the decorative possibilities of this sketchy little plant, which attains a height of two feet. The lantana blossoms profusely throughout the winter if given a daily drink and a sunny location.

You must, however, pinch the plants back while they are young or they are likely to become a bit straggling. There are several varieties of lantanas, all quite different in coloring, but all free bloomers. Some of the plants with the tints and tones of burnt orange are most decorative and the kinds with pink blossoms have much to recommend them. Then aside from their beauty they are easily obtained and very inexpensive. The wee plants which are sold for bedding purposes in the spring cost but a few cents.

The heliotrope is another old-fashioned flower which, while not very showy, is very suitable for house cultivation. Its color is so subdued that it does not rival such flowers as cyclamen or primrose, but its exquisite fragrance makes it a favorite with all who care for something more than mere brilliance. Plants that are expected to bloom in winter must, as I explained last spring, be prohibited from blooming during the summer.

To grow heliotrope to perfection it must be given a soil containing well-fertilized loam and sand. It must have plenty of root room and must never be permitted to become dry at the roots for even an hour. It has a great quantity of very fine roots which enable it to make use of large amounts of water daily, and the amount that would be enough to supply the needs of a good sized geranium would be entirely inadequate for the needs of heliotrope. A few hours' dryness at the roots will result in the ends of the shoots immediately becoming dry, after which most of the leaves will begin to fall off.

This plant is of tropical origin and can stand more strong sunshine than many plants that are used for house decoration. It is easily grown from cuttings.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

To the limit of space, questions pertaining to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease.

TEETH, GUMS AND VITAMINS

THE trend of opinion runs increasingly toward the opinion that diet is the principal element in determining the health of the gums and teeth.

Dr. May Mellanby has gone several steps further in her proof that plenty of vitamin D is necessary for the maintenance of the teeth in good, sound condition. The principal sources of this vitamin are cod liver oil, viosterol and radiated foods. She has succeeded in proving that human beings, rabbits, rats, and dogs need an ample supply of foods rich in this vitamin, not only that the teeth be of good quality when they are cut but also that they may grow as they are worn down, and that the dentine may harden as the enamel wears away. By feeding the proper foods, she has caused the growth of good tooth structure in teeth that were originally of poor quality.

She was not able to produce decay in rat or rabbit teeth, with either of the microbes which are usually held responsible for tooth decay. This inability to produce decay in experimental animals, and the rarity of tooth cavities in lower animals, have made it difficult for her to make a direct study of the subject of such great interest to parents of school children as well as to dentists. Since use of the proper food appears to prevent decay, she is especially anxious to find out how far it will be of use in stopping it.

In the field of repair, she cannot go further now than to study what happens around tooth cavities, when the children who have them are fed on the proper foods. Since this must be a miscroscopic study, and decayed teeth are not pulled if the process of destruction is not progressive as well as being advanced, there is not much material with which to work. All of this goes to establish that for good teeth a proper diet ranks above mouth hygiene.

Another of her findings is that of a deficiency of vitamin A could cause spongy gums and pyorrhea. The foods rich in this vitamin are butter and various other fats, carrots, yellow corn, and many other vegetables, especially those that contain fats. This is not in agreement with many investigators who have placed all the responsibility for nutritional gum disorder on vitamin C. However, Dr. Mellanby has not gone as far in her studies of the gum disorders as she has with those that related to the tooth structure.

CUBAN ITCH

B. W. B. writes:

1. What is Cuban itch?
2. How does it differ from rabbit itch?
3. What are the remedies for these pestiferous afflictions?
4. Do you answer correspondents by mail for postage or fee?

REPLY.

1. Soon after the Cuban war a mild form of smallpox prevailed. It was camouflaged under the name "Cuban itch," and was supposed to have come from Cuba. The Cubans said they never heard of Cuban itch. Since then no one has heard of it. Now you dig it up.
2. Smallpox was once known as Cuban itch. Scabies, or seven year itch, is sometimes called itch. You will have to invent something for rabbit itch. I am helpless.
3. Smallpox calls for medical care. Scabies calls for a good sulphur ointment properly used. I pass on rabbit itch.
4. Yes, if stamped, addressed envelope is inclosed for reply. There is no fee.

MAY BE PROMISING

L. P. T. writes: Last week I visited a clinic and learned that they do an abdominal operation to get at a nerve on the backbone, which definitely cures Raynaud's disease for all time when successful, and in nearly all cases it is successful.

REPLY.

Yours was the second letter to substantially the same effect received on the same day.

The operation has been under trial for some time. We have referred to it several times. We devoted one article to it. We regard it as promising.

County Policeman, Injured, Improves

Claude Reese, Struck by Auto on Boulevard, Painfully Hurt.

Although suffering from a compound fracture of two ribs, a broken collarbone and lacerations to the head, Clauda Reese, Prince Georges County policeman who was struck by an auto, was reported as "improved" last night at Providence Hospital. His condition is still serious, however.

George M. Weigandt, of Baltimore, said to be the driver of the car which struck Reese at Beltsville on the Baltimore boulevard, was being held without bond at the Hyattsville Police Station. He was charged with passing another car on the wrong side and reckless driving, and further charges may be placed against him if Reese dies.

According to Officer William A. Clifton, who was with Reese, the injured man was struck while talking to the driver of an automobile he had stopped. Reese and Clifton, patrolling the road, stopped another machine and Reese went back to question the driver. While standing beside the car, Weigandt's automobile rounded a curve, Clifton said. Reese, attempting to avoid the Baltimorean's car, leaped to the right of the road. Weigandt's car, Clifton said, swerved in the same direction and struck Reese.

Committee Will Settle Boundary Line Dispute

The boundary line between Riverdale and Edmonston, Md. will be settled by a committee composed of councilmen of both municipalities, two members of the Riverdale council having been already appointed. They are A. J. Kracke, jr., and A. R. Bowers, who were named after Mayor Max Vollberg had received a letter from Edmonston calling attention to the uncertain line.

The council has also decided to ask the Postoffice Department to continue the house-to-house delivery of mail on Clinton street and part of Roosevelt, Pierce and Taylor streets. Delivery on these streets was suspended when it was found that the mail carriers could not complete their tour within the required time of five hours.

Hyattsville Buys Site For Olive Street School

Purchase of a site for an auditorium at the Olive Street School in Hyattsville was announced yesterday by Nicholas Orem, county superintendent of schools. The land, a part of the Howard estate, cost $2,000.

About $17,500 has been set aside for the new construction, but this is not believed to be sufficient. No date for the start of building has been set.

Constable Is Called In Wayward Goat Case

Constable Earle Blackwell got Mrs. Minnie Fitzgerald's goat yesterday in Capitol Heights, Md. And he got it at the request of Mrs. Thomas J. Luckett.

The goat (capra hircus to you, professor), was an actual one, alive and loose in the neighborhood. Mrs. Luckett called the policeman, who is Texas-born and therefore wise in the ways of quadrupeds. Lacking a lariat, Blackwell was forced to adopt a more prosaic mode of capture. He took it by the horns and led it back to Mrs. Fitzgerald.

Mr. Orr stated the company now has a request for permission to operate before the State corporation commission, having had a hearing on August 29, last, and is awaiting a decision from that body. Also application was made to the District of Columbia authorities yesterday. Lambert, chairman of the Alexandria School Board, relative to recommendations of the recent school survey board about additional school facilities, and Councilman Dwyer offered a motion that a date for conference with the school board be set. Mrs. Annie Dunbar appeared before council to request further consideration for her appeal to have the 100 block, North Columbus street, rezoned to permit the operation of a tea room, which was granted, the council to take the matter under advisement. Fairfax County to Arrange $3,000 School Building Loan

The Fairfax County, Va., School Board, meeting yesterday, voted to apply for a temporary loan of $3,000 for 60 days to assist in completing work on Franconia School, now under construction. This action was taken when it was found that funds from the State literary fund would not be available until later.

Divisional Supt. Wilbert T. Woodson reported that after weeks of negotiation with officials of the Southern Railway, which transports a large number of pupils to the Clifton School, a schedule had been arranged whereby the train would arrive at Clifton Station at 9:15 in the morning instead of 10 o'clock.

The board refused the request of the Chesterbrook parents for an additional teacher for the 63 pupils enrolled under two teachers. A request for an additional school bus to Potters Hill School was refused. The parents were advised that under the State law the board could require all pupils living within 2 miles of the schoolhouse to walk, and if the bus is overcrowded those living nearest the school will have to walk.

Bills for the past month totaling $17,591.97 were ordered paid, as was Providence literary bond No. 8, of $439.56, on Oakton School.

SETH PARKER DEBUT IS FILM SENSATION

Notables of Capital Swarm to Premiere of Radio's Loved Character.

By DON B. REED.

Washington's Fifteenth street last night put to shame Hollywood boulevard, in Hollywood, and Broadway, too, with a world premiere of "Way Back Home," the first picture venture of Seth Parker, of radio fame. And no Broadway or Hollywood premiere ever had a more distinguished gathering of diplomats, Government officials and society than that which graced the RKO-Keith's house to cheer a new star of the cinema but a favorite of millions of radio listeners.

Headed by the French Ambassador and Mme. Claudel, a capacity crowd passed through the battery of Kleig lights, cameramen, policemen, ushers, Radio-Keith-Orpheum officials, press agents, newspaper reviewers and a curious public to acclaim Phillips Lord (Seth Parker) and a notable cast in a picture that will rank well up in the list of the year's finest.

While the Boys' Independent Band whooped it up outside the theater, gayly attired in flags and bunting, many persons prominent in the daily life of the Capital passed inside, including the British Ambassador and Lady Lindsay, the Mexican Ambassador, the Swiss Minister and Mme. Peters, the Irish Minister, Mr. MacWhite; the Turkish Ambassador, Senator and Mrs. Borah, Senator and Mrs. Robinson, Gen. Douglas MacArthur, Gen. Squier, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Fries, Judge and Mrs. Peyton Gordon, Mrs. H. D. Flood, Maj. and Mrs. Parker West, Mrs. Thomas F. Walsh, Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, Mr. and Mrs. Merle Thorpe, Mr. and Mrs. Francis White, Mr. and Mrs. Victor Kauffmann, Dr. and Mrs. Stanley Rinehart, the Rev. and Mrs. Z. Barney Phillips and Mr. William Butterworth.

Simple Tale of Rural Life.

"Way Back Home" may be described, without reservation, as one of those all too few pictures which have everything. As a matter of fact, it has one more appeal than the ordinary film in that a vast radio audience will respond to the opportunity to see Seth Parker.

A simple story of life in Jonesport, Me., expertly enacted by a carefully selected cast and directed by a man who evidently spent a considerable portion of his life in a rural atmosphere, "Way Back Home" deserved the ovation which an appreciative audience gave it.

Those who saw last night's premiere hummed with the neighborly gatherings at Seth's; they suffered with the kindly souls who had their heartstrings stretched to the breaking point; they rejoiced with the lovers in their new found happiness and they revelled in sparkling backwoods humor which runs through the piece like a mighty guiding beacon.

Phillips Lord has a lovable role of which he makes the most. RKO has surrounded Seth with a cast that aids immeasurably in producing a splendid article. "Ma" Parker is portrayed by Effie Palmer; "Liz," a delightfully comic character seeking a marriage match, is played well by Mrs. Lord. The "Cephus" of the story is offered by Bennett Kilpatrick; Raymond Hunter is "The Captain;" Frank Albertson, as David Clark, and Bette Davis as "Mary Lucy," furnish the love interest; Oscar Apfel plays the part of "Wobblin'" Duffy; Runaway Rose is played by Dorothy Peterson; the villainous Rufe Turner is excellently presented by Stanley Fields; Frankie Darro does the role of Robbie, Seth's adopted son, and Wade Boteler has a short bit as an income tax expert.

"Judge Not" Is Film's Moral.

To mention one member of the cast as outstanding would be unfair, but especial honors are due the Darro lad for a realistic job as the boy, loved by the Parkers, stolen by a drunken father and saved by Seth in a melodramatic climax that had the audience cheering. Bette Davis, too, was appealing as the girl in love with David, the boy without a father. Dorothy Peterson does well as the woman shunned by her neighbors because she loved not wisely, but too well.

If there is a moral to the picture, it is "Judge not, that ye be not judged." But the moral and the story itself are thrown into the background because the characters put the audience in a mood to live the scenes with them.

Through it all may be seen the excellent guiding hand of William A. Seiter. Deft touches here and there such as the party telephone line; the taffy pulling and the pranks of the boy leave the impressions of one who has lived in just such a place as Jonesport.

Auxiliary features included the second of Floyd Gibbon's "Supreme Thrills" a story of the American offensive between Soissons and Chateau Thierry during the World War and a Pathe newsreel.

ABOUT THE SHOWSHOPS

With NELSON B. BELL

THE definite announcement that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's production of "The New Adventures of Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford" has been booked for the Palace Theater in this city the week of November 13, and that, as was the case in Baltimore several weeks ago, William Haines, the star, will make a week of personal appearances in conjunction with the showing of the film, reminds me that Haines, to me, has always seemed an exceptionally competent and patient comedian.

It has been stated here many times before that in the opinion of this column one of the most difficult chores that can be allotted an actor of any sanity whatever is to be continuously and unremittingly a smart aleck through from five to eight reels of celluloid. That is the task that usually was assigned Haines. No stigma ever should have been placed upon his capability or his work simply because he was cast to impersonate a succession of exceedingly irritating cutups and wisecrackers.

That, of course, is all changed in "The New Adventures of Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford," but for the life of me I can not visualize William Haines as the predatory character created by the late George Randolph Chester.

This, I take it, is because the original Chester stories were illustrated by an old friend of mine and the figure of Wallingford pictured by Charlie Chambers was such a far cry from the physical Haines that the two to me are irreconcilable. Without having seen the film, it would seem as fitting to cast one of the Singer midgets as Gargantua!

However, I am willing to accept the verdict of every critic who has seen it that "The New Adventures of Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford" is one of the hit pictures of the season and far and away the best thing Haines has done in recent years—but I still think Ernest Torrence could have been made to LOOK more like Wallingford than Billy Haines will!

Those were goings-on, I mean, at that world premier of "Way Back Home," with Phillips Lord in his famous radio character of Seth Parker, at RKO-Keith's last night. As early as 7:15 there was enough Hollywood out on Fifteenth street in front of the theater to draw a crowd—spotlights, newsreel makers, brass bands about to explode into music and everything.

The dramatic editor of The Post was there in spirit, but the Sunday editor was here in the office chained to his desk! They look so much alike you probably wouldn't be able to tell them apart.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has issued invitations for a special preview screening of "The Champ," costarring Wallace Beery and Jackie Cooper, in the Ambassador Theater next Tuesday afternoon at 2.

That is as nice a bit of time and place choosing as I have recently encountered, but since admission is to be by card only, it would be thoroughly in consonance with all of my recent luck to lose mine over the week-end.

Prizes for the winners in the costume section of the parade staged Halloween night will be awarded from the stage of the Fox Theater tonight at 8:45 o'clock.

Due to the unprecedentedly large number of participants in the parade, the judges have been forced to leave the selections of winner until tonight. Entrants will meet in the Fox Dancing School, top floor of the American Building, 1317 F street, tonight at 7. The judges then will make their selections and immediately thereafter the winners, in costume, will be conveyed across the street to the Fox, where the prizes will be awarded.

The members of the Stratford-Upon-Avon Shakespeare Festival Company, appearing this week at the National, were guests of Francine Larrimore, Guthrie McClintic and the Professional Players yesterday afternoon at the matinee performance of S. N. Behrman's new comedy, "Brief Moment."

Robert Douglas, the young English actor, who plays the leading male role in "Brief Moment," held an informal reception for the Stratfordians backstage after the matinee.

The "Brief Moment" players had been invited to see "A Winter's Tale," at the National, on Wednesday afternoon, but because of the daily and, indeed, midnightly, rehearsals, Mr. McClintic is holding of the Behrman comedy, they were unable to attend the Shakespeare performance, greatly to their disappointment.

S. N. Behrman, by the way, has spent the week in Washington rewriting, editing and polishing the manuscript of the comedy. Last night a revision of the climax of the play was acted for the first time.

Also Mr. Behrman has completed here the revised text of the piece for publication. Farrar & Reinhardt will bring this out in book form early next month.

And Alexander Woollcott, the former journalist and critic who is making his first stage appearance in "Brief Moments," is learning much, so it is said, that he never had suspected about the theater, chiefly along the lines of the insistent demands the calling makes upon the time of the actor.

Well, I suppose it is possible that too many naps can be crowded into a day, but I never would have believed it!

So I went into the uptown barber shop with the sign in the window reading, "Three chairs, no waiting," and, sure enough, there wasn't any—for the barbers!

The flair for the frothy bits of comedy that have been apparent in the Shakespearean dramas of the week blossomed into full flower last evening when the Stratford-Upon-Avon Festival Company presented the five-act "Twelfth Night."

With the same master craftsmanship characterizing the four previous plays, light comedy is portrayed just as superbly as the heavier and more tragic dramas. Seldom does an acting company enter into the spirit of its piece quite to the extent that these players did last evening—every role, every line, every scene reflecting a profound understanding of the task essayed and a genuine love for its sympathetic rendition.

Thus did Eric Maxon play the part of Orsino, the duke frequently rebuffed by Dorothy Francis, the fair Olivia. So did Roy Byford, as Sir Toby Belch; Kenneth Wicksteed, as Sir Andrew Aguecheek, and Randle Avrton, the Poo-Bah-ian steward to Olivia. So, also, played Fabia Drake, as Viola, in love with the duke, but pressing his suit for Olivia's hand with lyric eloquence. Bruno Barnabe, as a servant and jester to Olivia, is highly to be commended for his tomfoolery expressed in both words and song.

Little short of foolhardy it would be to try to detail the ramifications of the plots and counterplots of this farce, whose wit and humor, contrasted with the more serious eelments of the drama, blend into a whole that delights from every aspect and sends the audience away from the theater feeling better and happier for having seen a wholesome farce beautifully staged and acted.

VINEGLO BECOMES A MEMORY AS FIRM ABANDONS ITS SALE

legal entanglements of both the Volstead act and the cooperative loan regulations of the Federal Farm Board.

The abandonment of the chemical nursing service signalizes the collapse of one of the most audacious ventures in national sophistry in the history of the world.

In its original form the Vine-glo sales formula undertook to lay down choice wines at $4 a gallon. The transaction covered a period of some three months and was legalized temporarily by the fatuous argument that what was only grape juice at the instant of sale became wine by immutable processes after the keg had been consigned to the cellar.

Attorney General Mitchell let it be known soon after the project attracted national attention for the first time, early last year, that prosecutions could arise only where the transaction revealed a clear intent to violate the prohibition laws, and Prohibition Commissioner Woodcock later announced that arrests could be made only where the liquor proved to be "intoxicating in fact."

Obtained Advances.

Fortified by these official pronounciamentoes, the California grape growers obtained advances aggregating approximately $5,000,000 from the Farm Board, with which to launch a $20,000,000 project for the control of a grape surplus of 700,000 tons.

Wets and drys in and out of Congress promptly fell into violent but uncoordinated assault upon the moral integrity of the whole scheme and a few weeks later news emanated from Chicago that Scarface Al Capone had passed out the word that Vine-glo was "on the spot." Taking his position on the high ground that successful wine making in the home would sour the whole system of two-gun rackets, Public Enemy No. 1 decreed that the stuff could not be landed in Chicago. Several freight-yard raids on various brands of concentrates were reported during the summer of 1930.

Nor was it a mere routine assignment to sell the idea to E. C. Dinwiddie, Dr. F. Scott McBride, Dr. Clarence True Wilson and Mrs. Ella Boole. The Antisaloon League, the Methodist Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals and the Women's Christian Temperance Union were all inclined from the outset to take a rather realistic view of the situation, and it was not until Mrs. Willebrandt had pleaded with the joint forces for two hours behind closed doors here one day last December that one of the leaders announced that for the moment "we can look at the matter in a broad view."

Price Advances.

So broad did this view turn out to be that dry forces in Congress did not seriously undertake last winter to upset the bubbling wine keg. Politically speaking, things rather drifted and the next time Vine-glo was in the papers the price had advanced to $5 a gallon.

Under the new distribution system, grape concentrates will be sold through legitimate trade channels. House-to-house distribution may be set up later, Mr. Conn said, but in that event "an effort will be made to extend the uses of grape juice as a soft beverage."

Mr. Conn announced the new policy in Mrs. Willebrandt's legal suite in the Shoreham Building. In behalf of the head of the firm, however, it was said that she had confined her services to legal advice. Mrs. Willebrandt would not comment on the new sales policy. Later in the day she left for New York.

Officers of Fruit Industries were emphatic in their statement that the Government had not forced the new sales method. It was wholly a voluntary move.

Eighty per cent concentrate now will sell for $1.50 a quart. It dilutes 4 to 1 in water, but will keep indefinitely in the can on the grocery shelf.

The new system became effective at 6 o'clock last night.

ARMY BUDGET CUT 44 MILLION DOLLARS

beginning July 1, 1932—that is the 1933 budget.

"Following the insistence of the President for the utmost reduction in expenses of all departments consonant with maintained efficiency of the services, the War Department by vigorous economies and deferment of programs not vital at this time has been able to cut its budget for 1933 approximately $44,000,000 below the appropriations for 1932. It is able to make these changes without decreasing the efficiency of the Army for national defense or its training program.

"Under the universal rule of many years' standing the details of the budget are confidential until they are communicated by the President to Congress."

The Secretary declined to make any comment on the measure of the President. The armament reduction program of the United States has thus been most auspiciously launched and it now remains to be seen whether the example of the United States will be followed by other European nations.

To Talk Arms Cut.

The Italian foreign minister, Signor Dino Grandi, when he comes here November 17, will discuss the principles of arms reduction with the President and the Secretary of State. It is believed that the action of the President in thus taking the lead in the world-wide problem will go far toward creating additional proof of the intentions of this Government to reduce all armament. The United States already is signatory to the twelve-month arms truce proposed by the League of Nations beginning November 1.

ACACIA MUTUAL LIFE CONTINUES TO GROW

Paid Business in October Totals $3,250,000; Gains Expected to Last.

By THOMAS M. CAHILL.

Acacia Mutual Life Association is still progressing. Statistical data just completed and presented to the board of directors of the association by William Montgomery, president, reveals further gains and development by the Nation-wide insurance organization, the home office of which is loacted at First street and Indiana avenue northwest.

According to the figures set forth by President Montgomery, the "placed," or paid-for business for the month of October, 1931, was more than $3,250,000. This amount, it is explained by the Acacia executive, is larger than the corresponding figure for many months of the current year and it is shown to be particularly important in that it continues the upward trend begun several months ago.

"The figures for the placed business during October are especially encouraging," Mr. Montgomery said last night, "because they indicate to us that our consistent efforts to build back to previous levels are getting very tangible results. Now that we have established a definite upward trend and are maintaining it, we are convinced that succeeding months will witness further substantial gains."

Reinstatements Still Gain.

The board of directors and President Montgomery likewise are gratified, it is stated, at the manner in which reinstatements are continuing to hold up in response to Acacia's traditional policy of giving close attention to the lapsation record. The favorable trend of recent months was maintained in October when reinstatements totaled more than $1,650,000.

As of the end of October the volume of insurance in force by the Acacia Mutual Life Association aggregated more than $363,000,000. From the large home office building here are directed the activities of Acacia branches in virtually all important centers of population in the United States.

Directors of General Motors Corporation at their meeting yesterday declared on the outstanding common stock the regular quarterly dividend of 75 cents a share, payable December 12 to stockholders of record November 14.

In addition, the regular quarterly dividend of $1.25 a share was declared on the $5 preferred stock, payable February 1, 1932, to stockholders of record January 4, 1932.

Dollars and Sense.

The first edition of Dollars and Sense, publicaton of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, to appear under the editorship of Norman E. Towson, assistant treasurer Washington Loan & Trust Co., and original editor of the magazine, should commend itself to chapter membership for further support.

Although compelled to appear in pamphlet form through voluntary renunciation of advertising by chapter officials the advertisements seem to be all that it has lost. In news arrangement, visibility and freshness of style, it has lost nothing. Unconventional photographs of prominent members of the chapter enliven the newsprint.

There are sections dealing with chapter affairs, news from the board of governors, consuls and committees. The work of the educational committee is reviewed and there are pages devoted to editorials, national institute news, economies, banks and banking, law, books and miscellaneous information.

Editor Towson describes the inception of the magazine, the initial issue of which appeared in December, 1920. It was planned in the single room then occupied by the chapter over Gude's flower store on F street. Its title was the creation of William Rankin.

Florsheim Shoe Co. declares a regular quarterly dividend of 37½ cents on class "A" and 18¾ cents on class "B" common stock, both payable December 1 to stockholders of record November 14; also a regular quarterly dividend of 1½ per cent on the 6 per cent cumulative preferred stock, payable December 31 to stockholders of record December 15.

RAIL HEADS TO MEET ON WAGES AND JOBS

Executives of Southern and Western Lines to Take Up Union Offer.

(Associated Press.)

A meeting of Western and Southern railway executives will be held next week to consider the proposal of labor organizations for a joint conference on unemployment and wages.

Eastern railway executives are being asked to participate, but no decision on their part has been announced.

Word of the conference was received yesterday by D. B. Robertson, chairman of the Railway Labor Executives Association, who proposed the meeting. He was so advised in a telegram from W. R. Cole, chairman of the Southwestern Presidents Association, and J. W. Higgins, chairman of the Western Executives Association.

L. F. Loree informed Mr. Robertson that any question relating to wages should be taken up with the bureau of information of Eastern railroads in New York.

Where the conference will be held was not known here.

Meanwhile, the labor leaders spent another day discussing problems of the workmen. They adjourned late today and will meet again before Congress convenes to complete their legislative program.

A committee was instructed to prepare a Federal full crew law under which all trains would be required to have at least two men on the engines. Mr. Robertson said some engines now are operated with only one man. He added the legislation was intended primarily as a safety measure but that it also would aid unemployment.

A Federal workmen's compensation law to provide that railway employes obtain their money automatically without resorting to expensive lawsuits also was discussed. A committee was directed to continue its studies.

Another committee was appointed to study ways of enabling the labor organizations to keep a better check on the records of office holders and candidates for office. Such a record is kept now and the candidates favorable to labor are supported.

How to make more authentic wage statistics assembled by the Interstate Commerce Commission came up for brief consideration, but no action was taken.

Greenway Rise, Once Home Of 'Nellie Bly,' Purchased

Elaborate 14-Room House to Become Residence of Out-of-Town Investor; Formerly Occupied by Newspaperwoman Who Made World Tour.

Greenway Rise, near Charlottesville, Va., former home of the late Mrs. Elizabeth Bisland Wetmore, "Nellie Bly," a pioneer newspaperwoman, who set an early time record for a trip around the world, will soon become the residence of an out-of-town investor. He does not want his name disclosed at this time, and the price he pays will not be made public.

Contract of sale has been entered into for the purchase of the beautiful 15-acre tract with its handsome dwelling from the estate of the famous journalist. As a reporter for the New York World, she demonstrated that Jules Verne's novel, "Around the World in Eighty Days," was not fantastic fiction, by circling the globe alone in less time.

By the transaction, which was conducted by the L. S. Scott Corporation, of this city, through its branch office at Charlottesville, the buyer will acquire a picturesque house of fourteen rooms, situated near the University of Virginia. The home, of Spanish architecture with a Moorish influence, is two and a half stories in height and is built of brick and stucco. Its interior decorations are very elaborate, one of the rooms being treated with gold leaf paper. The Spanish-Moorish motif is also carried into the arrangement of a garden adjoining the dwelling.

Mrs. Wetmore acquired the property through the former H. W. Hilleary Co., of this city and built the residence as her home. She formerly owned a distinguished residence on Woodley road and was also owner of a beautiful estate near Oyster Bay, Long Island.

The L. S. Scott Corporation has sold many historic homes. Prominent among them are Monticello, designed and occupied by Thomas Jefferson, sold to the Monticello Foundation; Gunston Hall, seat of George Mason, author of the Virginia Constitution and Bill of Rights, sold to Louis Hurtle; Rosegill, patented in 1649, by Ralph Wormley, sold to H. L. Bogert, jr., of Eastman, Dillon & Co. "His Lordship's Kindness," built in 1720 by the Earl of Shrewsbury and original home of the Talbot family in Maryland, sold to Mrs. Chandler Hale.

Mrs. Wetmore, late owner of "Greenway Rise," was born at Fairfax Plantation, La., in 1861, and began her literary career on the New Orleans Times-Democrat, writing under the pen name "Nellie Bly." She became an editor of the Cosmopolitan Magazine and was a contributor to the Atlantic Monthly and North American Review, besides being the author of several books including "A Flying Trip Around the World." She married Charles W. Wetmore, of New York in 1891.

Cotton Credit Talked in Paris

Paris, Nov. 5 (A.P.).—Pierre Pasquier, who accompanied Premier Laval unofficially to the United States to arrange for cotton purchases, returned to Paris today and said he had a proposition which he would present to "interested parties here." He refused to discuss the terms, but intimated they hinged on credits.

Game Bird Exhibit Is Held in Capital

District Division of A.A.A. Acquaints Huntsmen With Their Prey.

The American Automobile Association Building at Seventeenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest is the scene of an elaborate "sportsmen's show" being staged this week by the District of Columbia division of the association to acquaint the huntsman with the variety of game birds found in the vicinity of the Capital.

The "show," open from 8 a. m. until 12 midnight, contains an exhibit of live birds as well as mounted ones. There is also shown the latest types of guns and hunting equipment, and information pertaining to all phases of the hunt is accessible to all those interested.

The display offers an excellent opportunity for the sportsman to see his quarry alive. He can learn how and what he eats, its habitat, and the minute differences in coloring and plumage. The exhibit also affords a chance to see game birds unknown in this part of the world in the wild state.

Membership in Legion Shows District Gain

American Legion membership in the District of Columbia exceeds that of any other previous year on the same date, James F. Kehoe, chairman of the District membership committee, disclosed at a meeting of that committee last night.

The national headquarters has congratulated the local department on its fine showing. A concerted drive is being made at the present time to reinstate old members and to obtain as many new members as possible before November 11, in compliance with the wish of the national commander.

Mayflower Files Receiver Assent

Agrees to Step Taken in $7,500,000 First Trust on Hotel.

The Mayflower Hotel Co., Inc., yesterday filed in the District Supreme Court a formal answer assenting to the appointment of John Lewis Smith, Rush L. Holland and J. Miller Kenyon as receivers of the first trust of the hotel.

The trust, aggregating $7,500,000, was brought into the proceedings last week when the Chatham-Phoenix National Bank & Trust Co., corporate trustee of the mortgage, declared in a petition for receivership that there had been a default in interest payments.

The three receivers were already at work in the hotel because of their appointment several weeks ago as receivers for the $2,750,000 second trust, in which there had also allegedly been a default in interest payments. The hotel will continue to operate with the receivers in charge.

ALABAMA GAME IN CAPITAL FOR CHARITY PLANNED

Georgetown, Catholic U. And G. W. Consider Plan To Play 1930 Champions

Each Would Oppose Crimson Tide for Twenty Minutes.

Decision Due Today; Ball Park Offered for Dec. 12.

THE undefeated Alabama University team of 1930 which won the Rose Bowl championship of Pasadena would play the varsity elevens of Georgetown University, Catholic University and George Washington University here on December 12 for the benefit of the District of Columbia unemployed under a plan submitted to the heads of the three local institutions yesterday.

The failure of attempts to schedule a game betwen two local teams has resulted in the proposal that the members of the brilliant Alabama squad of 1930 meet the three Washington colleges in a single game here for the unemployed fund. Under the plan, the game would be divided into three 20-minute periods with Georgetown, Catholic and George Washington each being represented by its regular team during one of the periods.

Decision Is Due Today.

George Washington University, through President Cloyd Heck Marvin, already has approved the plan which was under consideration last night by the athletic boards of Georgetown and Catholic University. The decision of the latter institutions is to be made today, it was announced.

Eight of the members of the Alabama team which routed Washington State in the Rose Bowl last year by a 32-0 score are now seniors at the Tuscaloosa institution while the remainder have been active this season as coaches and assistant coaches.

The maximum expenses for the game would be $3,500, with the proceeds to be given to the District of Columbia Committee on Unemployment. Should the expenses be less, a refund will be made to the employment committee.

The game, if scheduled, and hopes are high that it will be, doubtless will attract one of the greatest crowds ever to witness a football game in Washington. Clark C. Griffith, owner of the Washington ball club, has offered the use of Griffith Stadium gratis for the December 12 date.

Coaches on Game Committee.

Under the proposed plans, arrangements for the game would be in the hands of the head coaches of the three Capital colleges—Tom Mills, Arthur J. Bergman and James E. Pixlee, who with two members of the employment committee would form the directing group.

The game, if arranged, is calculated to capture the imagination of the Capital's football fans. In addition to exhibiting the team that was recognized in many quarters as the national champion last year, the game will offer the only direct comparison of the ability of the three rival Washington teams.

Adams Rejects Plan For Navy-Utah Game

(Associated Press.)

Secretary Adams has rejected a proposal by Senator Smoot, of Utah, that the Naval Academy play a postseason football game with the University of Utah.

Replying to a telegram, the Secretary said the distance to be traveled and its accompanying interference with scholastic work would preclude such a game.

2 G. W. TEAMS READY FOR SALEM

Pixlee Undecided as to Squad That Will Start Tomorrow.

COACH JIM PIXLEE definitely selected his first and second team in yesterday's practice session of the George Washington varsity, but he wasn't sure with which one of the two elevens he would start the game against Salem College tomorrow night.

On the first eleven were Mulvey and Chambers, at ends; Slaird and Nielsen, tackles; Stewart and Hickman, guards; Payne, center, and Parrish, Carlin, Usnik and Fenlon alternating in the back field. Both Payne and Hickman were moved up from the second squad because of injuries to Frank Blackistone, regular center, and Tom Dike, guard, who probably will be held out of tomorrow night's game for fear of aggravating their hurts.

Kriemelmeyer on Second Team.

On the second team Galloway and Clark performed at end; Chestnut, Asher and Hale, tackles; Wilson and Littleton, guards; Conn, center, and Kriemelmeyer, Carter, Hendrickson and Coogler were in the back field.

Except for Blackistone and Dike, the Colonials appear to be in top shape. Both these lads have bad legs, which are slow in healing, and the G. W. mentor indicated that he would not call upon them tomorrow night unless absolutely necessary. This is hardly likely, Coach Pixlee thinks, unless Salem should spring a decided upset.

Giants Send Three To Minors in Deal

Indianapolis Given Berly, Heving and Rosenberg for Koenecke.

New York, Nov. 5 (A.P.).—The New York Giants today announced the transfer of two pitchers and an outfielder to the Indianapolis Club of the American Association in payment for Leonard Koenecke, star outfielder.

The trio are John Berly and Joe Heving, right-handed pitchers, and Harry Rosenberg, outfielder.

When Koenecke was purchased late the past season by the Giants it was announced the deal would involve player talent valued at $75,000. No cash changed hands, at the reuest of Norman Perry, owner of the Indianapolis Club.

Koenecke was personally scouted by Manager John McGraw and is rated as one of the best outfielders in the minors.

Berly came to the Giants this year from the Rochester Internationals and Heving in 1930 from Memphis. Berly won seven and lost eight games last season in big league company. Heving was used chiefly in a rescue role.

Rosenberg came to New York from the San Francisco Club, but was farmed out to Bridgeport, in the Eastern League, last season.

Macks Release Todt To St. Paul Ball Club

Philadelphia, Nov. 5 (A.P.).—Connie Mack, manager of the Philadelphia American League Baseball Club, announced tonight the transfer of Phil Todt, first baseman, to St. Paul, of the American Association. Todt is being sent to the minor league club to complete the deal whereby Oscar Roettger, St. Paul first baseman, is brought to the Athletics.

Todt was obtained by the Athletics in February, 1931, when he was purchased from the Boston Red Sox for the waiver price. He played in a number of games this season and was used several times as a pinch hitter. He throws and bats left handed.

T. J. Crowell Winner In Civitan Tournament

The Civitan Club staged a golf tournament yesterday on the course of the Beaver Dam Club, 40 members competing. The prizes were gold medals donated by Capt. Walter Fletcher Smith. The first prize was awarded to Thomas J. Crowell, whose score was 97—16—81, and the second prize was won by S. T. Cameron, whose card was 119—38—81.

Franco-German Team Wins Berlin Bike Race

Berlin, Nov. 5 (A.P.).—The Franco-German team of Brocardo and Tietz won Berlin's twenty-sixth 6-day bicycle race concluded tonight. The winners covered 2,349 kilometers (2,017,629 miles) and amassed a total of 148 points.

A. U. and Hopkins To Battle Tonight

Eagles, Minus Parke, Are Facing Hardest Contest of Year at Baltimore.

AMERICAN UNIVERSITY'S hapless football team, weakened by the loss of its star back, Ed Parke, goes up against what is probably the strongest team on its schedule when it meets Johns Hopkins tonight on Homewood Field, Baltimore. This year finds Hopkins with the best eleven it has boasted in a decade and one that has yet to taste of defeat.

The Methodist team enters the game realizing its only chance of winning will be through the medium of the forward pass, and with that in mind Coach Young has been adding several aerial plays to the American repertoire this week. The brunt of the passing will be borne by George Borsari, stocky full back.

Borsari, ordinarily a quarter back, has taken Parke's place, and the signal calling will be done by John Mohr, center. This change will in no way "give away" American's plans, however, as the Methodists form a huddle before starting a play.

Chates, formerly a half back, will perform at left end tonight, while Bowers, another reformed half, will hold down the other flank if he has recovered from a recent injury by game time. Otherwise, Larson will be the right end.

Danny Kessler, former Eastern High star, will play at quarter back, due to the previously mentioned back-field shake-up.

5th Unbeaten Foe to Face Ramblers

Notre Dame Battles Best Pennsylvania Team in Years.

Friedman Lectures to Yale's Gridmen on Passing.

CHICAGO, Nov. 5 (U.P.).—For the fifth time this season an undefeated football team will furnish the opposition for Notre Dame when Pennsylvania comes West to battle the fighting Irish at South Bend, Saturday.

Indiana, Northwestern, Drake and Pittsburgh were undefeated until they met Notre Dame, and only Northwestern came through the test without joining the ranks of the beaten brigade. Northwestern and Notre Dame played a scoreless tie.

Pennsylvania is one of the East's four undefeated and untied teams, and one of the country's eleven major teams with perfect records. Doubtless remembering what happened to them last year in their first game in history with Notre Dame, the Quakers probably entertain small hopes of stopping the Irish.

Irish Ran Up Score Last Year.

In last year's game Notre Dame's devastating blocking swept Penn to a 60-to-20 defeat. The Irish piled up their huge total before Penn scored three times on the reserve.

Reorganized and rebuilt by Harvey J. Harmon, former Pittsburgh player under Pop Warner, Penn has its finest team in years, and, barring the Northwestern game, may give Notre Dame its hardest test thus for of the season.

A comparison of the 1931 records of the two teams follows:

Notre Dame			Pennsylvania
28	Indiana	0	32 Swarthmore	7
0	Northwestern	0	14 F. & Marshall	0
63	Drake	0	32 Lehigh	0
25	Pittsburgh	12	27 Wisconsin	13
19	Carnegie Tech	0	5 Lafayette	0

Dartmouth Completes Workouts.

Hanover, N. H. (A.P.).—Unwilling to risk further injury to a squad already badly battered, Head Coach Jack Cannell, of Dartmouth, prohibited contact work today as the Indians made final preparations for the Harvard game. The players will not don uniforms again until just before game time. Dave Hedges, third string full back, apparently will start in place of the injured Bob Wilkin.

Benny Friedman Stars At Yale.

New Haven, Conn. (A.P.).—Benny Friedman was the "star" of Yale's practice session. While the squad listened in, Benny delivered a lecture on forward passing—the formations to be used and the practical and psychological effects of the play. The varsity had only a light drill, since the reserves are expected to do most of the work against St. John's, of Annapolis, this week.

Harvard Practices Blocking.

Cambridge, Mass. (A.P.).—Harvard ended preparations for Dartmouth with one of the lightest workouts of the season. The squad, in an hour and a half, went through blocking, tackling and assignment sessions and finally a signal drill.

Wittmer Shifts His Backs.

Princeton, N. J. (A.P.).—Al Wittmer applied finishing touches to Princeton's attack for the Lehigh contest. Gooch and Ceppi went into the first-string back field, while Craig and McPartland retained their places. The line remained intact with Wister and Lea, ends; Lane and Gill, tackles; Smithies and Billings, guards, and Hinman, center.

Passing Drill at Army.

West Point, N. Y. (A.P.).—Army's backs and ends indulged in a long passing drill, while the guards, tackles and centers scrimmaged against the scrubs. Stecker, Carver, Elliott and MacWilliam did most of the passing, with Lawlor, Remus, Bolbo and Kopcsak on the receiving end. Armstrong, burly tackle, out for a week, was back and expects to start against Louisiana State.

Sansone, Turfman, Is Sued for $2,548

The suit filed by James McNally, of Brooklyn, N. Y., against Frank Moscarelli, known to turf followers as Frank Sansone, for $2,548.50, which he claims is owed him for back salary and commissions on purses and bets, was heard in the Prince Georges County Circuit Court yesterday. McNally charges Moscarelli with failure to fulfill his agreement after he had won races with Reproof, Yeggman and Black Patricia, horses he trained for Moscarelli. The complaint was taken under advisement by the presiding justices, Judges Joseph C. Mattingly and William A. Loker. A decision is expected either today or tomorrow.

Hilltop's Line Holds Hopes Of Mills

G. U. Must Get Jump on Bucknell to Have Chance.

Visitors Are Superior in Ball-Carrying; Hinkle Star.

AS Georgetown's fine goes, so goes its entire team these days, with the Blue and Gray carrying a skeleton back field force as the result of injuries. Therefore, according to Georgetown observers, the chances of Tommy Mills' eleven against Bucknell tomorrow in Griffith Stadium rest almost solely on its ability to outplay the Bisons in the forward wall.

A peculiar twist of fate has dealt Georgetown an unprecedented number of injuries in the back field department, but at the same time has treated lightly the linemen. So Coach Mills tomorrow will be able to send his strongest set of forwards into battle with the hope that it will withstand the test he expects the Bison line to present.

If successful in repulsing the charge of Bucknell's forwards, the Hilltoppers logically enough will check Bucknell's hard-running backs, among whom is the mighty Clark Hinkle, a triple threat star who led the East in scoring two years ago. He plays at full back.

Bucknell Has Superior Back Field.

Bucknell unquestionably has a superiority in the back field with a quartet of ball carriers who average 182½ pounds to the man and who are ably backed up by reserves. Hinkle weighs 190 pounds; Anthony Mezza, quarter back, tips the scale at 195; Ed Myers, right half back, weighs 170, and his running mate, George Vetter, is five pounds heavier.

With an array of huskies such as these behind the line, Bucknell depends largely on running plays on the attack. Power is the keynote of the Bison offense with much reliance placed in the forwards to clear the way for Hinkle & Co. But if the forwards fail, the runners are not likely to get far.

Coach Mills has nominated Charley McManus to perform at center for Georgetown, while the injured Fred Callahan continues to rest. McManus, a veteran, is rated Callahan's superior on offense, but he lacks the height and weight to equal the youngster as a defensive center. Callahan is one of the few Hilltop linemen who have been injured this season.

In the back field, Georgetown probably will start with Leroy Bordeau at full back, Dick King at quarter back, Nick Viskovitch at left half and Joe Alenty at right half. Of this group, only King and Alenty are free from injuries, but Bordeau and Viskovitch, despite recent battering, will perform as long as they are able at their own request. Reserves for these four are all too few and inexperienced to satisfy Coach Mills.

Bucknell's squad is due here today at 2:30 p. m. and Coach Carl Snavely will send his men through a workout shortly thereafter.

Bucknell Reviews Georgetown Plays

Special to The Washington Post.

Lewisburg, Pa., Nov. 5.—Bucknell varsity gridders watched Georgetown plays in a dummy scrimmage here today, the last home workout before the game in Washington Saturday.

A party of 36, including 29 players, coaches, trainers and managers will leave here at 8:55 tomorrow morning and will reach the Capital City in time for a brief limbering-up drill in the late afternoon.

Bucknell's starting line-up will be the same as that used in the Villanova game last week, Coach Snavely indicated tonight.

C. U. EXPECTS DE MELLO TO STAR

Triple Threat Ready for Test Against Manhattan.

WHILE Manhattan scouts, and friends of the New York aggregation which takes on Catholic University's Cardinals tomorrow in C. U. Stadium, have told the Metropolitans to look out for the Cards' bit of lubricated lightning, Tom Whalen, they may find their gaze attracted by another C. U. back whose improvement this year has placed him on equal footing with Whalen, and given C. U. a "name" in Eastern football.

Carl DeMello is the husky—the same leg-driving back whose crack all around play gave Catholic University a thrilling victory over Duquesne. His kicking, passing, more than expert blocking, and the manner in which he can lug the hoghide around an end, make him a serious obstacle in the path of the invading Gothamites.

Three Changes in Line-Up.

As a result of yesterday's lengthy workout, Coach "Dutch" Bergman announced three changes in the Cardinals line-up for tomorrow. Johnnie Lyons, a hard-working senior who has not shown as much skill as willingness, will replace Ray Howe at right end, while Tom Nally and Phil Gross, regular tackles, will help ballast the sideline stools in favor of "Bingo" Flynn and Laurence Stafford, a couple of 200-pounders who can be counted upon to smear many a Manhattan off tackle play.

The Manhattan huskies will arrive at 2:15 today and proceed immediately to Catholic University, where a workout will be held later in the afternoon.

CHALMERS IS RELIANCE OF MARYLAND

Versatile Old Liner May Bring Upset of Vanderbilt.

THE expression, "Let George do it," has no part in the discussion of Maryland University's gridmen regarding their big battle with Vanderbilt's Commodores tomorrow in Nashville, Tenn., but though each Marylander is ready and anxious to do his bit in an effort to overpower the favored enemy, the playing of "George" probably will be most conspicuous, particularly in the event that Maryland wins.

George Chalmers, whom campus comrades call "Shorty" or "Bull," is Maryland's chief reliance in this game that will make or break the Old Line eleven as far as an unbeaten Southern Conference record is concerned. As the pupils of Curley Byrd near the scene of combat today, it is Chalmers, more than any other individual, on whom supporters of the Black and Gold pin their hopes.

Chalmers Has Weapons.

For Chalmers carries in his accurate right arm, his strong right foot and his clear-thinking mind the weapons which might upset the rugged Commodores, add to Maryland's slate its sixth triumph of the campaign and register victory No. 4 in the quest of conference titular honors.

Maryland has an experienced, well-rounded team, including several individuals each of whom is capable of performing a game-winning feat. But Chalmers has no equal when it comes to versatility.

A single pass, a single kick or a single run by the talented Old Line half back may sweep the Byrdies to their most notable achievement of a notable season.

It was a long forward pass from Chalmers' hand which enabled Maryland to defeat Navy on October 10, and a week later young Sure-Fire hurled another aerial which saved his team a whipping from a stronger Kentucky eleven. Then in subsequent games George performed on the throwing and kicking ends of successful assaults against V. M. I. and V. P. I., both of which fell before the Byrdmen by decisive scores.

Maryland's—Chances Slim.

Maryland's chances of winning are slim, indeed, for Coach Dan McGugin's crew has every advantage along physical lines, but with the clever Chalmers in there tomorrow the Commodores may be the victims of a surprise.

Champion and Challenger Await Opening Gong for Bridge Bout of Century

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Special to The Washington Post.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—The ballyhoo is under way and proceeding nicely toward a battle of the century in the game of contract bridge. There seems to be two outstanding claimants of the title. Mr. Sidney Lenz has been recognized as champion by a group of experts corresponding to the New York prize fight commission, whose selections of prize fighting champions have been arbitrary and quite fallible. Mr. Lenz might be said to be the Jack Sharkey, or commission champion of contract bridge; Mr. Ely Culbertson is the challenger, recognized as the logical contender in New York and regarded as the actual champion by some.

Mr. Lenz, I understand, is the more scientific of the two, with a stlye best suited to a short bout, whereas Mr. Culbertson's style, like that of Max Schmeling in the prize ring, is adapted to a longer distance. He is a 40-rounder, or finish-contest bridge expert, who likes to wear his man down with his chin.

Both boys have managers and are doing very well with their exhibitions and writings while waiting for the customers to turn on the heat and produce a great popular demand for the match. Mr. Culbertson first demanded a match of 500 rubbers, which would be practically a finish bout, as one boy or the other would be almost certain to collapse within that limit. Mr. Lenz preferred a short bout to a decision, preferably 125 rubbers. They finally compromised on 150 rubbers.

The ballyhoo has not yet reached the final stage. When that stage is reached there will be the usual deadlock over the referee and the foul rule, and each boy's manager will insist on being allowed to examine the cards before they are dealt. I know that in heavyweight championship prize fights the opposing managers always take great care to search their opponent's gloves, just to keep the game of prize fighting on a high, clean plane and free of any slimy smirch of suspicion.

The contract bridge managers are not only suspicious but they are also jealous of the fair name of their sport and determined to keep it on a high, clean plane. Therefore, by all means, they should carefully examine the cards for readers, scuffed spots and nicked edges and should agree on a neutral dealer of the highest integrity who can not be reached by any of the sinister characters who are constantly skulking like a bad apple in a barrel ready to strike a blow at something fine and clean. Mandell, Ex-Champion, May Lose Meager Purse

CHICAGO, Nov. 5 (A.P.).—Sammy Mandell, once a great champion, but now only a ghost of the greatest boxer of his time, faces the humiliation of not receiving a cent as the result of being ordered from the ring in the eighth round of his pitiful engagement with Ralph Lenny, after the Battalino-Mastro featherweight championship fight in the Chicago Stadium last night.

This development came today, causing the admirers of the former lightweight titleholder to urge him to quit the ring. Under the rules of the Illinois State Athletic Commission, the purse of a boxer tossed out of the ring is automatically forfeited, and the only compensation he may receive is train fare to and from his home, plus $25 a day for training expenses.

Despite the pleas of his admirers, Mandell will attempt to continue boxing. He thinks he received a raw deal when Referee Tommy Thomas declared his bout with Lenny "no contest" in the eighth round of a scheduled ten-rounder which followed the blistering featherweight

Walker-Stribling Matched For Garden Bout Dec. 11

NEW YORK, Nov. 5 (A.P.).—Jimmy Johnston, boxing promoter for Madison Square Garden, today announced he had practically completed negotiations with Mickey Walker and W. L. (Young) Stribling for a bout in the Garden December 11.

Proceeds of the bout will go to the New York American's Christmas fund.

Jack Kearns asked him several days ago to get Stribling for a fight in December, Johnston said, and he got "Pa" Stribling's consent by long distance telephone to Atlanta, Ga., today.

Johnston said contracts probably would be signed next week.

Stribling Starts Comeback Campaign.

Stribling recently started a comeback campaign from his defeat by Max Schmeling in a fight for the heavyweight title in Cleveland July 3.

Walker, former middleweight titleholder, gained heavyweight consideration by his amazing fifteen-round draw with Jack Sharkey in Ebbets Field last summer.

Dusek Beats Kirilenko To Punch

Cradle Roll Decisive as 4,000 Watch Mat Show.

Nebraskan Is Accused of Strangling Foe; Gardini Wins.

By BOB CONSIDINE.

A TURBULENT stream of Cossack corpuscles cascading down his gnarled countenance, and from his throat issuing the gasps of a freshly strangled man, Matros ("Mattress") Kirilenko, Russian rassler, was rolled into a tangled heap of twisted muscles last night by Relentless Rudy Dusek, a wildcat in wrestler's clothing, who laid the Russian like a roll of linoleum in 52 minutes with what is known in the profession as a cradle roll.

The ending looked like a bad accident, but it brought a gallery of 4,000 to its feet for a thrill such as it has not had in recent months of wrestling. Suspecting foul play of some sort, several hundreds filled the edges of the ring, while Umpire Nelson upheld the legality of Dusek's Japanese neck lock, which to all appearances weakened Kirilenko considerably near the end. One patron wanted to fight Dusek, and invited the fiercest wrestler of them all to "come out in the alley."

It was not a pretty exhibition of the art of applied mayhem, but it gave every appearance of being sincere. Umpire Burns permitted everything in the ring, from eye-gouging to rum diabling, and deserves some of the glory of winning, along with Dusek. Twice was he the insulation between the two huge men, as they rolled or fell out of the ring to lay a few choice and informal lefts into each other just for old times' sake.

Turner Administers To Russian.

"Your Own Joe Turner" as the announcer insists on calling the matchmaker, had to apply first aid methods to Kirilenko at the conclusion of the gory hour. The Russian's face resembles a relief map of the moon, for there was a deal of slugging, and one eye was in almost full eclipse from a judicious poke.

Kirilenko had things his own way for 40 minutes, but with nothing more potent in his kit than a good headlock and a fair combination armstrangle and scissors, he could not come close to grinding Dusek's shoulders down to the nether regions of the mat. Evidently realizing this, the two 220-pound boys amused the kiddies in the audience with some swell toe-to-toe slugging, with clenched fists, which made one thankful that these rough little 126-pounders, with the 16-ounce gloves, are forbidden by law to bring the fierce fight game to Washington. Give us the good old art of wrestling match, like last night's main event, where the 220-pounders fight it out for the right to meet the next night at the next stop of Route 40.

Preliminaries Not Too Hot.

The preliminaries were exceptionally bad, with the possible exception of several episodes in the O'Shocker-Znoski bout, and about half of the Gardini-LeDoux affair, but the patrons seemed to like the latter. O'Shocker and Znoski went 30 minutes to a draw, generally listless in the extreme. Gardini beat LeDoux in 13 minutes with a back body drop and, after a 10-minute delay during which the knaves in the audience blew their "Bronx" rubbers merrily, finally made one of his saliva-spouting speeches in a brogue as thick as the cauliflowers he wears for ears.

In effect he challenged Mr. Dusek to an engagement. The first two bouts were abortive affairs. Don De Laun tossed Andy Zarahoff in 13 minutes with a headlock and one Leon Smith beat a certain Elmer Johnson in 18 minutes where wrestling science consisted of terrific faces and ostentatious suffering, offered by two awful stiffs.

American Boxers Win Six Bouts in Sweden

Stockholm, Sweden, Nov. 5 (A.P.).—American amateur boxers won six out of seven bouts from Sweden in an international series tonight. The only American loser was Joe Facino, Boston featherweight, who dropped a decision to Lennart Bohman.

In the flyweight class, Henry Burns, of Boston, defeated Herbert Anderson. Mike Belloise, New York bantam, outpointed Goesta Ahlm; Steve Salek, Boston lightweight, defeated Nils Karlsson; Charles Cravetta, welterweight from Uniontown, Pa., defeated Harry Eklund; Mark Hough, New York middleweight, defeated Harry Gustafsson, and Joe Melham, Kansas City light-heavyweight, defeated Gustaf Erikson.

There was no heavyweight bout.

This MORNING with SHIRLEY L. POVICH

HARVARD and Dartmouth command the bulk of attention on the East's college football program tomorrow. The battle at Cambridge, steeped in tradition, and offering another test for Harvard's unbeaten team, towers far above the remainder of the games in the Seaboard sector in point of importance.

With a scintillating victory over Army as high spot of its record, Harvard has returned to the high estate it held as a ranking member of the defunct Big Three. Eddie Casey, hero of one of Harvard's last great teams is the man of the hour in Cambridge. A proponent of the revered Haughton system of play, Casey, if his team surmounts the remaining hurdles, will reestablish the Haughton system that has been overshadowed by more popular Rockne and Warner methods.

The game with Dartmouth is no foregone conclusion. The Hanover Indians showed rapid improvement after their 19-6 beating at the hands of Columbia, by coming back to tie Yale at 33-33 with a sensational rally in the fourth quarter last week. The talented toe of Morton will be an ever-present threat if the field goal is necessary for a victory.

Penn travels to South Bend with a vivid memory of the 60-20 rout that the Ramblers administered before a home town crowd in Philadelphia last fall. That was the occasion when Marty Brill, who had not been deemed good enough to make the Penn team of two years before, put on a one-man rebuttal for Philadelphia fans in leading Notre Dame to a crushing victory.

Penn, too, goes West boasting a clean slate. Although the Quakers narrowly escaped defeat against Lafayette last Saturday, they showed surprising power in a 27-13 defeat of Wisconsin a week previous. On comparative scores, Penn should provide Notre Dame with fully as much opposition as did Northwestern which played the Ramblers to a scoreless tie. But the latter game was played on a muddy field which seriously handicapped Notre Dame's type of play.

Anent Penn's 3-to-0 victory over Lafayette last Saturday, the Quakers were presented the contest by the first field goal that Bud Smith, reserve back, ever kicked in a college game. Young Smith kicked one other field goal in his life, a placement boot while he was attending Swarthmore Prep.

Henceforth Washington fans who have had a lean football menu thus far this season, will be treated to a full fare of games. Both Georgetown and Catholic University hold forth on local fields tomorrow against Manhattan and Bucknell, respectively, a pair of battles that are calculated to produce much good football.

The game with Bucknell will mark Georgetown's first home appearance in four weeks, but the Hilltoppers will offer two of its feature games before the month has passed. The following week will see the invasion of the West Virginia University Team in a game that has come to be regarded as an annual event on the local calendar. On November 28 the powerful Detroit Team will invade the Capital.

The hardest opposition faced by a Capital eleven tomorrow will be encountered by the Maryland team which travels to Nashville, Tenn., for its game with Vanderbilt. Maryland believed it met a titanic team in the Kentucky eleven three weeks ago, but the Vanderbilt squad is reported to outweigh even the Wildcats, who had an aggregate advantage of more than 200 pounds over the Old Liners.

George Washington University is being weaned away from night football, according to the schedule releases for next year. In the University of Alabama, the University of Iowa and Oklahoma University the Colonials have listed three opponents who are calculated to draw crowds on their reputations.

The night games in many instances have been a distinct boon to the gate receipts, but the nocturnal contests served chiefly to draw crowds which otherwise might not have taken the afternoon off. Especially in the case of mediocre opposition for the local elevens.

Minnesota Grid Star Threatened in Letter

Minneapolis, Nov. 5 (A.P.).—University of Minnesota today said Clarence Munn, football captain, had received a letter threatening to "get" him, but that they planned no investigation.

Munn was one of three Minnesota gridders who received letters mailed from Madison, Wis., offering $1,500 each if they would "throw" the big game with Wisconsin last Saturday. Minnesota won 14 to 0.

Munn's newest letter was written on stationery of a Pittsburgh, Pa., hotel (Fairfax) and mailed in that city. It said, "Your name will be mud. We will get you. To publish this will do you no good."

It was signed "Dutch Burzik, a guy that's never been crossed twice."

University officials said they believed this letter a result of the others and that they were not written by the same person. They branded all the work of jokers.

TOTE IS NEVER HEADED IN PIMLICO CLAIMING HANDICAP

WheatleyColt Staves Off Challenge

Beats Repentance by 1½ Lengths, Aided by Malley's Ride.

Walls Scores on Enro at $46.00 Mutuel in First Race.

By J. B. SNODGRASS.
Special to The Washington Post.

PIMLICO RACE TRACK, Nov. 5.—Wheatley Stable's Tote scored his second victory in his two starts here when he led all the way in the feature here today, a handicap at 1 1-16 miles. Tommy Malley landed him under the wire a length and a quarter in front of Mrs. Herbert Pulitzer's Repentance. Sagamore Stable's Rip Van Winkle, installed favorite, was third, three lengths back of the second horse. Hillsborough was fourth. The time was 1:45.

The horses finished almost in the same rotation in which they left the gate. Tote was much the best, but not the favorite, being almost overlooked until late, when his price was forced down, paying $13.30.

The crowd was smaller than yesterday's, but the stands and lawns were well filled. The weather was colder, keeping down the attendance, but the racing continued to be good.

The form was shown by two horses winning their second races in four days. Tote had an advantage of eleven pounds over Repentance, the contender.

Enro Scores in Opener.

M. Lowenstein's Enro won the first race for maidens, 3-year-olds and upward, by a neck, Enro being a 3-year-old, and paid $46.00, one of the outsiders in a cheap lot. Tuscan Knight was second, a half length away from the odds-on favorite, What Have You, which was purchased at private sale before the race by Joseph McPherson. P. Walls rode Enro, and few gave the son of Dodge a chance. While What Have You went to the front after clearing the first turn, he was soon outrun by Tuscan Knight and the winner. The slow time of 1:46 was hung out for probably the cheapest field that will be seen at Pimlico.

Tulachard Wins Sprint.

Tulach Ard, coupled with Daisaburo as the L. E. Keiffer entry, got the decision by a head in the Maryland's Own, a purse for 2-year-olds bred and foaled in Maryland. S. W. Labrot's Boscobel, coupled with Monel, was second, and a half length back A. H. Morris' Pennywise was third. Daisaburo was fourth. This was the first mount of A. Pascuma at this meeting, he riding Tulach Ard. The time was 1:13. Boscobel made all the pace, except during the spurt by Fairgerstown, but Tulach Ard was never far away, closing fast just in time to save the purse. The winning entry paid $7.40.

Mad Frump Beats Juveniles.

C. V. Whitney's Mad Frump won the third race for 2-year-olds by two lengths going away. Capt. Ral Parr's Ladino, favorite, was second, a nose in front of Mrs. Walter M. Jeffords' Thursday. A nose further back Big America was fourth, a head in front of the fifth horse. The time was 1:12 1-5. The winner, A. Robertson up, paid $8.90. Mad Frump went to the front from the gate and then was restrained off the pace set by Big America, Ladino and others. Turning into the stretch, Robertson again moved with Mad Frump and in close quarters came through the field to get the lead and win easily.

Vacillate Repeats In Fourth.

H. D. Bonesteel's Vacillate won the fourth race by five lengths, being her second victory here, proving another victory for W. Nertney. Mrs. Milton Holden's St. Francis, favorite, closed very fast after a slow start to finish second a half length in front of the third horse, Flag Time. The winner paid $11.10. They ran six furlongs in 1:11 4-5. There was a long wait at the starting gate. Vacillate led all the way, never being in danger. Portcodine was closest to the pace to the top of the stretch. He finished fourth.

Mrs. John Bosley's Old Times led all the way in the sixth race at a mile and three-sixteenths, winning by a length and a half, while Buck Hero, the favorite, after following the pace to the far turn, dropped out of contention. Double O, moved up on the turn for home and placed by three lengths from Abeth, his running mate. The time was 2:01, and the winner paid $20.60. P. Walls had the winning mount, his second for the day, having ridden the long shot, Enro, in the opener.

Latter, steadied in close attendance of the leaders, gained a slight lead in the closing furlong, but hung approaching the finish. PENNYWISE dropped back rounding the turn, was placed to stout pressure and, punishment to close fast when securing racing room between his field. DAISABURO, slow to get going, closed a big gap. TARQUIN raced evenly for the entire trip. HAGERSTOWN was rushed hard all the way and weakened nearing the end. JAFFA showed no speed at any stage.

MAD FRUMP, racing in the thick of contention from the start, swung to the outside entering the home stretch, took command and came away smartly. LADINO, rated close to the pacemakers, responded to punishment and held on willingly. THURSDAY improved his position up the inside in the first half mile. He came with good courage under a stout drive at the end. BIG AMERICA and DIANE DE PORTIERS were used up setting the pace. LADFIELD could not threaten the leaders. BRAVE AND BOLD was outrun. The others had no excuses.

VACILLATE, a rapid beginner, opened up a safe lead after the first three furlongs, saved ground and was never in danger. ST. FRANCIS, unable to race in contention early, came with good speed in the final test. FLAG TIME, closest to the winner in the early running, faltered fast in the final furlong. PORTCODINE held on well for the final test. IRONSIDES was going gamely at the end. AVALON met with interference. MERRIE MACQUEEN tired.

TOTE, displaying excellent speed to take command at once, raced under restraint until entering the home stretch and held REPENTANCE safe under slight urging. Latter, allowed to follow the pacemaker under mild urging, threatened stoutly entering the home stretch, but was not good enough in the final drive. RIP VAN WINKLE could not reach the first two when shaken up for the final test. HILLSBOROUGH made up ground by racing next to the inner rail in the final stages. DOUBLE O, well placed early, responded gamely and closed with good courage. ABETH, slow to settle in his stride, circled his field and came with a belated effort through the home stretch. CALL PLAY held on willingly when the final issue came. BUCK HERO, under stout restraint in the first six furlongs, flattened out badly when put to pressure. COLONEL CRUMP had no excuses. CHANCELLOR could not reach the leaders when going to a drive. FAIR BETH was going gamely at the end. GULLY JUMPER finished full of run. JORICO raced poorly. RED RONALD stopped, as did FETISH.

PIMLICO RACING NOTES

Special to The Washington Post.

PIMLICO, Nov. 5.—Candidates for the $40,000 added Futurity, to be renewed Saturday, were on the track this morning for final preparation. Indications are there will be a field of twelve. C. V. Whitney's Top Flight, which had her final serious workout this morning, going a mile in 1:40 3-5. Her condition was satisfactory, and she is believed a certain starter, and will be favorite, of course.

Tick On, Burgoo King, Osculator and Laughing Queen were among the candidates out early, and all showed fast works, especially Tick On and Burgoo King.

The Tennessee Stable's unbeaten Vander Pool, which has been on the shelf several months, was sent a slow 6 furlongs. The 3-year-old has some Maryland engagements if he could be gotten ready to race again.

Mrs. P. A. B. Widener's Dr. Syantax, Dorwood Stable's The Beaseland and other horses arrived from Belmont Park this morning.

Jack McPherson purchased What Have You at private terms this morning before the horse started in the opening race.

Trainer Stottler, who holds the contract on Willie Nertney, star rider, who rode 26 winners at Laurel, has put a limit on the lad's mounts of four a day.

Maj. Warburton, of Philadelphia, manager of Hialeah racing, was here today to confer with Mortimer Mahoney on the plans for the Florida course.

ARILLA WINS BOUT.

Paris, Nov. 5 (A.P.).—The Spanish flyweight champion, Arilla, outpointed Valentin Angelmann, former French title holder, in a 10-round bout here tonight.

ALEXANDRIA, WASH.-LEE BATTLE

Virginia High School Elevens Play Today; Records Good.

Special to The Washington Post.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Nov. 5.—Arrangements have been made by Alexandria High School officials to accommodate the largest crowd in several seasons tomorrow when the "Twins" engage the Washington and Lee gridders, of Arlington County, in the "Home-coming Day" attraction at Baggett's Stadium. The game will begin at 3:30 o'clock.

Both clubs have experienced fairly successful seasons on the field this year. Alexandria has won two games and lost four, while the Generals have won four and lost one. Their lone defeat was administered by Hopewell High eleven last Saturday at Ballston, 25-0. The Alexandrians played this club two weeks ago and also dropped the verdict, 20-0.

Both teams will be slightly handicapped by the loss of players. Mendelson and Yarter, two of the Alexandria best bets, are ineligible, while Capt. Archie Via, of the Generals, is not in the best of condition due to injuries and possibly will be on the bench the major portion of the game.

"I hope to give the Generals a real battle, and, if possible, give the home town fans a victory," declared Maurice Given, Alexandria coach, today. Given was a little worried as to whether or not Reds Jackson, guard, would be in the line-up. He was hurt in a scrimmage this week.

The high school coach said the Twins would probably line up as follows: Carr and Ewald, ends; Studds and Turner, tackles; Jackson and Janney, guards; Hoeft, center; Bruiin or Jennier, quarter back; Routzhan, Sheads, Cohen, Robinson, halves, and Hudson or Schriener, full back. Reserves for the line will be Davis, Edwards, Mendelson, Suthard, Luckett and Brown.

The Washington and Lee High School Cadets Band will accompany the Generals and will render selections during the playing of the game. Special request is made for the spectators to stay off the playing field.

BUSINESS ELEVEN SEEKS TO END 2 YEARS OF DEFEAT TODAY

Stenogs Face Weakened Central

Cumberland Is Chief Hope of Coggins' Combination.

Gonzaga and Swavely Clash at Manassas in Vital Game.

BUSINESS HIGH'S third good chance of ending a two-year losing streak crops up this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, when the oft-maligned Stenogs tackle the floundering Central High School Team in Central Stadium in the seventh game of the high school series. It is, doubtless, Business' last chance to call a halt to its lengthy "record," for Tech is the only remaining school on its series schedule.

Central has been so riddled by scholastic ineligibilities that it is on a playing plane little above Business, which has a tolerable line and a great natural ball carrier in Larry Flynn, 180-pound full back. The Blue and White, however, remain a favorite to win by at least one touchdown, but should be hard-pressed all the time.

Cumberland Is Chief Central Hope.

Frank Cumberland, quarter back mainstay, stands between Central and defeat. The only better than average player on the team who was not hit by studies, Cumberland, with his kicking, passing and end running, gives his team the edge. The game should be a two-man show, with Flynn and Cumberland playing the featured roles.

An unofficial District high school football champion may be crowned this afternoon, through the medium of a comparative score, when Gonzaga's hard-driving young team drops down to Manassas to encounter the Swavely Prep eleven. The unofficial title is at stake, since Tech High's only conqueror this year has been Swavely, 27-7, and Gonzaga's local record gives it equal ranking to Tech. The two teams are not listed to play this year.

Some of today's spotlight is held by the St. Alban's-Landon game, to be played at St. Alban's. The Saints have not been defeated all year, numbering Devitt and St. Christopher among its victims. Landon is a slight underdog, being smaller and packing less experience than the Saints.

If Swavely trips Gonzaga, the Purple cannot blame scholastic or physical deficiency. The I street squad is in better shape than any time this season. Viau and Keegin, its choice ball carriers, both will see service, while the passing combination of the Mills twins also will be heavily counted upon.

Court Team Sponsored By Vic's Sports Shop

Vic's Sport Shop will be represented on the court this season by a team of well-known local talent, it was announced last night. Buck Greir is president of the club, Dave Keppel coach, and Vic Guazza manager. The team has contracted for the use of the Silver Spring Armory on Sunday afternoons, where it will meet the best local teams and road clubs.

The following players, who have been signed for the season, will drill tonight at 7:30 o'clock at the armory: Curtain, Swift, Wall, Harris, "Cody" Shapiro, Hessler, Banta, Joe Sweeney, Dick Streeks, and "Tubba" Farrell.

MANDELL FACING LOSS OF PURSE

title fight. The judges, with Referee Thomas, decided individually and collectively on their verdict.

Thus Mandell, once a really great ring master, came to the end of a brilliant career, a pathetic, tragic figure.

In his last bout in the stadium with Jimmy McLarnin, Mandell received $23,000. Yet, less than eighteen months later, in the same ring, Mandell appeared for a purse of $1,250. That was the sum he was to have been paid, but he must appear before the commission next Monday to show cause why the purse should not be forfeited.

PALACE IN WORKOUT.

The Palace 150-pound gridders will work out tonight at 7:30 o'clock on the field at Tenth and E streets. Sunday the team meets the Northern Preps in an important Capital City League game.

CENTENNIALS DRILL.

Joe Khuen earnestly requests all members of his Centennial eleven to report tonight at 7:30 o'clock for practice at Seventeenth street and Constitution avenue northwest. Sunday the team tackles the Brentwood Hawks in a Capital City League game.

MERIDIANS.

The Meridian 150-pound football team will workout Friday night at 7:30 o'clock at Seventeenth street and Constitution avenue northwest. All players are urged to be on hand promptly.

ST. JOHN 12-7 VICTOR OVER DEVITT

Scanlon and Bradley Stars as Cadets Take Contest.

By LEWIS F. ATCHISON.

MARCHING in perfect cadence behind a hard charging forward wall, a quartet of shifty St. John's backs ran and passed their way to a well-earned 12-7 victory over an inexperienced Devitt Prep eleven on the Tidal Basin Field yesterday. The victory places Byrne's charges in line for the prep school title.

St. John's scored in the opening period after holding Devitt to no gain and receiving the ball on a kick. A series of off-tackle plunges, intermingled with a generous sprinkling of short passes, advanced the ball to Devitt's 20-yard line. A reverse play, with Mike Scanlon carrying the ball, produced the score. Scanlon failed in his attempt to rush the pigskin over for the extra point.

The Christian Brothers' boys tallied what turned out to be the winning six-pointer in the second quarter after another series of line bucks and short passes. They inaugurated a drive at midfield that penetrated to Devitt's 15-yard line. A triple pass, with the oval finally coming into Joe Cullinan's possession, netted the marker. Joe McCarthy missed the try for point.

Devitt Starts Drive In Second Half.

A determined Devitt eleven took the field at the start of the second half, and with several of the Cadets' regular players viewing the fray from the sidelines, had things pretty much their own way. The Preps ripped their opponent's line to shreds, burst off tackle, and for the sake of variety tossed a few passes, moving forward all the while.

They reached St. John's 10-yard line, but here the Scarlet braced, and after three attempts at smashing the line, Devitt was parked 5 yards to the rear of the original starting point. But just when the cause seemed lost, Quarter Back Bradley flipped a 10-yard pass to Maeyer, who tucked the ball safely under his arm and stepped off the remaining 5 yards as two Johnnies vainly dove at his knees. Farwell added the extra point with a neat dropkick.

Devitt's threat did not end with the third quarter, rather it gained momentum until it looked as though the Vermont avenue aggregation must surely bow in defeat.

Following Joe McCarthy's 65-yard punt, Devitt started a drive that carried it to St. John's 20-yard line. Bradley threw a short pass to Maeyer for a 20-yard gain. An attempted off-tackle play, and Bradley zipped another heave to Maeyer, and the latter was off. He shook off three would-be tacklers and was outdistancing a fourth when he stumbled for a thousandth of a second. Brief as the pause was, it enabled Scanlon to drag him down from behind and save the day. The reentry of the Saints' first stringers in the fray halted Devitt completely, and when Umpire McNamara's sheep-calling horn sounded to end the fray, St. John's was in possession of the ball on its own 25-yard line.

Golf Stars Gathering Here For National Capital Open

By HENRY LITCHFIELD WEST.

THE course of the Kenwood Club, which just now is plentifully covered with autumn leaves, was crowded yesterday with professionals and amateurs playing practice rounds preliminary to the National Capital open golf tournament which begins tomorrow morning.

In addition to the golfers there was an unexpectedly large number of visitors. The parking space in and around the clubhouse was soon filled and there was an overflow of cars upon the fairways and the adjacent roads, thus indicating that there will be no lack of a gallery when the show actually begins.

There was an almost entire absence yesterday of national high lights in the golfing world, and Tommy Armour, former national champion, and Bobby Cruickshank, who was runner-up to Bobby Jones in a dramatic play-off at Inwood, although they are in the city did not appear on the course. An influx of golfing stars, however, is expected today. Gene Sarazen and John Farrell, who gave an exhibition match on a course near Baltimore yesterday, will report this morning.

Among the golfers on the course yesterday were Peter O'Hara, who defeated Walter Hagen in the recent Professional Golfers Association National Championship; Augustus Nordone, who recently won the Northeastern New York P. G. A. Championship; Paul Runyan, of White Plains, together with others of lesser note. There was a generous representation, of course, of local professionals.

As the construction of the new nine holes was not commenced until the 7th of last March, a line on the back of the score card authorizes all players to improve the lie of the ball on all fairways. As there are numerous opportunities to play a ball out of bounds, the penalty has been reduced to loss of distance only.

Tomorrow the entire field will compete, eighteen holes, medal play, and the 60 low scores will qualify for a 36-hole contest on Sunday. The principal purse is $700, but nearly $2,000 additional will be divided among other winners. The pairings and times of play tomorrow are as follows:

Hitting the Head Pin

BILL WOOD'S Lucky Strike pinmen bowled over Columbia in a National Capital League match, rolled at Lucky Strike, last night, winning the odd game with 55 wooden soldiers to spare. It was a case of see-saw after the first game, which went to the Luckies by 14 pins. Columbia came back strong in the halfway frame, and wound up, as stated above, way back. Weidman, of the winning team, hung up some kind of a record when he finished the three games four points shy of a 300 set. That's one way to break 'em. McPhilomy had high set of the evening with 412, and Clarke, high game, 155. Archer was high game man for Columbia by virtue of his 131 effort, and Lawhorne captured high set, 359.

Rolling at the same drives, Buick captured high team honors in the Automotive League with a 1,605. L. P. Steuart's quintet walked in with the high game honors with a mark of 560, as it trimmed Leary Bros. two out of three. Dixon, of Buick, turned in high game and set for the night, 141 and 360.

Miss King, of the Pirates, took top honors in the U. S. Public Health Service Ladies League (Whew!) matches rolled at Lucky Strike last night. She had a game of 113 and set of 310. Her team rolled a set of 1,355 to win all three from the Cubs.

Veterans' Administration increased its lead in the Ladies Federal League to two full games, last night, by winning a trio from G. P. O. The team had a set of 1,522, while Minnie Menhorn was the individual star with a set of 338. Another change in the standings occurred when Interstate swept its match with Commerce Juniors. Mildred Henderson, of the winners, scored a set of 353, a new high mark for the season. Treasury dropped into third place when it lost the odd game to Census. Agriculture took two from G. A. O., Marines won a similar decision over Commerce Comets, and Commerce bowed to International Revenue. Labor won all three from Mines with little trouble. The official scorer of the league was saved no little embarrassment when her team, Economics, finally snapped out of its trance and salvaged the match with War to win by one game.

Just when Murphy's All-Stars had been strengthened by the addition of Singman, Slan and Dworin for its big match with Navy Yard in the Congressional League, the latter team failed to put in an appearance, the forfeit automatically kicking Murphy's boys up the ladder into first place.

In the Valuation Examiners League matches rolled at Columbia last night, Departure, Recapture, and Investment won 2-to-1 decisions over Income, Value, and Finance, respectively. Finance was hindered no little by its dummy score. Yerrick hit the maples for 128, and Leasure belied his name by hanging up high set, 346.

The Commercial Department Girls League of the Telephone Co. was at it again at Columbia last night, with the Southerns taking the Northerns into camp for all three.

The War Department League witnessed some hot battles at Arcadia with War College and Barbettes taking the odd one from Frankies and Adjutants, respectively. Constructioneers went about its task in a more thorough manner and gained the verdict in all three of its games with Panama Canal. Mathews, of Adjutants, scored high game and set with his 143 and 357. Barbettes, with 587 and 1,605, won the team laurels.

CONVENTION HALL NOTES

Milburn, of Dominoes, counted 152 pins for high individual game in the Nation Wide League . . . Baxter, of Harvesters, took the set laurels with 342 . . . Binders captured team honors with a game of 504 and set of 1,425 . . . In the Commercial League Carry's Ice Cream rolled a set of 1,642, followed closely by Daily News with 1,635 . . . The latter also had high set, 584 . . . Baird led the league with his game of 156 and set of 392 . . . In the Western Electric loop Switchboard stole the show, making the bell ring with a game of 551 and 1,573 set, due principally to the sterling work of Clements, who registered high set of 366 . . . Christenson, of Woodworking, was high for the night with his game of 135 . . . Charley Phillips went on another rampage in the Masonic League and scored a 150 game for King David, enabling the latter to bag the team honors in this respect with a 578 . . . Fielding's 363 was good for individual set honors, and Parker finished first in the race for high team set with 1,612.

BRIDGE BOUT OF CENTURY AWAITED

Compromise Brings Short Match of 150 Rubbers.

must be assured that the dealer can not be induced to deal them from the bottom to either boy.

Mr. Culbertson is putting up $5,000 against Mr. Lenz's $1,000, the winnings to go to charity. From this it might be inferred that the contract bridge boys are not very bright, because such a proposition is even worse than the winner-take-all agreement which was abandoned as bad business by the progressive business men of the prize-fight industry years ago.

The boys are not much interested in the gate receipts of their actual bout, if any, and would regard the contribution to charity as a trifling prize to pay for the championship title, with all its earning powers. Moreover, it appears that neither boy would have to put up the forfeit money himself, but would receive the backing of persons financially interested in his career.

The managers, however, should not carelessly overlook the possibilities of the actual gate receipts. Contract bridge has come to interest many more people than prize fighting nowadays, and, given the proper ballyhoo and management, this bout might fill Madison Square Garden with customers or kibitzers at from $5 to $25 per head. The players naturally would have to be isolated in a soundproof room, so that the groans and the cries of "Lead your ace, you bum!" could not be heard as the plays were run off on a large, illuminated board.

Bridge Kibitzers Very Partisan.

The bridge nut is far more partisan in the present rivalry than the prize-fight customer, who is strictly a vicarious boxer, and not committed to any one system, although the majority of them do have a mild preference for the free-punching style. The bridge kibitzers are all players themselves, however, and devoted to one system or the other. Consequently, they would turn out in large numbers, each feeling that something that was part of his life was on trial. It might be advisable to segregate them according to their respective systems to avoid outbreaks of disorder.

I am not a bridge expert, but I always thought that in any game of cards the luck of the draw had something to do with the outcome. This seems not to be the case in bridge, as it is contended that system and skill are the thing. If that is actually so, it would seem that ordinary bridge duffers, or suckers, or whatever the technical terms may be, should be rated on a handicap system, something like that followed in golf.

Obviously, the Messrs. Lenz and Culbertson are scratch men, and it would be no more fair for them to play ordinary commuters or Wednesday evening suburban bridge players on a scratch basis than it would be for Bobby Jones to meet a golfer with a 30 handicap in a scratch contest. Each player should be handicapped at a certain number of points, the ratings to be revised monthly, and any player sitting down to play bridge should be required to show his certified handicap card.

And Don't Forget the Testimonials.

The Messrs. Lenz and Culbertson seem destined to great wealth. If their bridge battle of the century takes place, the winner will receive testimonial offers from manufacturers of various kinds of pimento and anchovy paste and mayonnaise for bridge sandwiches, cigarettes, playing cards and scoring material. Even the loser, if shrewdly managed, would come in for some of this revenue, and both would be in demand for exhibition radio lectures and essays.

There might even come a mixed match between a lady and a gentleman player for the championship of the world. Most of the lady experts are married, so I suppose the lady, if she won, would say: "No, I am not in it, boys. The fact is, I have a dear little husband at home with babies, and I always rush home and dump my end of the purse in his apron after every championship bout."

Members of the Lenx faction tell me that both boys object to being called card sharps, but that has always been the name applied to persons who make their living playing cards, and I see no difference between the bridge expert and the faro dealer or three-card monte expert. But I do not want to make any social errors in this matter, and I trust the boys will think up a substitute as brief and expressive as the term "card sharp."

Ekaitis Signed by Hawks; Irvington Here on Sunday

Indians Seek to Hold Lead in League Title Race.

GEORGE EKAITIS.

GEORGE EKAITIS, star quarter back through two undefeated seasons of the Western Maryland eleven and former intercollegiate boxing champion, has been signed by the Mohawks and may be in the starting line-up of the Indians when they face the Irvington Club, of Baltimore, Sunday at Griffith Stadium in a South Atlantic League game.

In addition to Ekaitis, Manager Patsy Donovan has signed Berkowitz, last year's G. W. back. The Mohawks have been forced to bolster their back field due to injuries received in last Sunday's Apache game. However, Snail DeLabre is the only Hawk who will not be ready for action against the Baltimoreans. DeLabre has a broken bone in his shoulder.

A repetition of the hard-fought Apache-Mohawk game of last Sunday is expected when the Hawks face Irvington. In their previous encounter early in the season, they fought to a scoreless tie. Now that each team has its offensive in good working order, scoring seems assured.

The Hawks must win to hold the lead in the league race.

FEDERALS PLAY SUNDAY.

All members of the Federal 135-pound football team are requested to report at 12:30 Sunday at the field for their game in the Capital City League. The game must begin promptly at 1 p. m. or it will be forfeited to the opposing team.

Earle Baker, Takoma Tiger Star, Is Married

Earle Baker, first baseman of the Takoma Tigers, unlimited champions of The Post's Capital City Baseball League yesterday signed a life contract in the matrimonial league. Baker and Miss Pauline Kraft, of Rockville, Md., were married in the Epworth M. E. Church by the Rev. Robert L. Wood at a private ceremony witnessed only by the members of the families of the couple. Immediately following they departed for a tour of the New England States.

STILL seeking their first victory of the season, the Blues of Gallaudet tackle the strong Quantico Marines this afternoon at Quantico, Va. Thus far the Kendall Green eleven has not scored a point, while losing four straight games.

Although they have failed in every effort to date, the Blues have not lost confidence in themselves and they expect to make trouble for the Leathernecks, who have won all their games this season.

Coach Teddy Hughes noted a decided improvement in the performance of his players last week against Pennsylvania Military College and feels that Gallaudet will at least hold their opponents to a low score. He also believes the scoreless record will be punctured.

O'Branovich, who was injured a week ago, will return to the Gallaudet line-up at full back, but Gamblin and Hnatow, alternating quarterbacks, must warm the bench because of ailments sustained against Pennsylvania Military College. Williams will direct the Blues, with Jenser and Walnoha filling the half back posts.

STOCK PRICES CLOSE LOWER AFTER RALLY

Closing Changes Are Small on Leading Issues; Metals Make Wide Rises.

New York, Nov. 5 (A.P.).—Strong markets for commodities and bonds failed to arouse much sympathetic enthusiasm in stocks today.

Perhaps Wall street preferred to give wheat further opportunity to prove itself in view of its sensational gains; or it may have been that traders believed shares, averaging 15 points above the October 5 lows, had already discounted such improvement in sentiment as had already appeared and that the cause of reconstruction would best be served by comparative stability.

At any rate, the market, after selling moderately higher in the morning, fell back during the afternoon and closed irregularly lower, although above the day's minimums. There was intermittent group strength in metals, based on the 1½-cent rise in silver.

Closing Changes Small.

Final changes on leading stocks were mostly fractional. U. S. Steel, American Can, General Electric, National Biscuit, Case, Paramount, New York Central, Pennsylvania, Consolidated Gas and Baltimore & Ohio were off ¼ to ⅞ net. American Telephone and American Tobacco "B" lost a point. Union Pacific and Atchison sagged 2, while Western Union duplicated its 10-year low at 76, off 3½.

Some of the less active issues especially affected by commodity gains were International Silver, Home Stake, Pillsbury, Skelly preferred and Shell Union preferred, up 2 to 3. American Zinc preferred rallied about 7 on small sales. Atlas Powder and Goodyear also firmed. Sales totaled 1,528,043 shares, or roughly the volume in recent sessions.

The Reserve Bank statements revealed an increase of $63,000,000 in money circulation, but bankers did not feel that this meant a revival of hoarding, pointing out that the report covered the month-end when cash demands are larger. Otherwise, the system's position gave further evidence of the much easier banking position. Discounts were off about $11,000,000 while bill purchases declined more than $82,000,000. The reserve ratio of the twelve banks rose to 61.5 per cent from 59.9 per cent a week ago.

Bar Silver Mounts.

Bar silver made a new high for the year at 32¾ cents an ounce. Prices in London and the Far East were also higher, reflecting purchases by Germany and India. The advance was accompanied by strengthening quotations in Mexican and Chinese currencies.

Sterling exchange reacted about a cent and a half but closed half a cent higher at $3.76⅛ for cables. Francs eased a little, but the reichsmark advanced with German bonds.

Wheat's rise was checked by profittaking, but futures closed ⅞ to 1⅜ higher. A substantially increased public participation in that market was reported here. Corn was boosted 1¾ to 2¼ cents net, partly on bullish Argentine advices. Cotton rallied late in the day, finishing 20 to 35 cents a bale higher.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

Chicago, Nov. 5 (A.P.).—Uncounted hosts of buying orders today swept all cereals to a dizzy altitude, but at least temporary market overstrain was unmistakable at the last.

A sudden reaction in the final dealings tumbled prices backward, with sellers more numerous than buyers for the time being. Earlier record breaking advances, however, had been of such extent that even on the setback all grains were higher than yesterday. Reports of staggering drought losses to crops in Russia furnished the chief stimulus to buyers, together with persistent drought reports also from domestic winter wheat territory Southwest, as well as disturbing advices about severe moisture shortage in Canada.

Wheat closed unsteady, 1¼ to 1¾ cents below the day's top, and ⅞ to 1⅜ above yesterday's finish, corn 1¾ to 2¼ advanced, oats ⅝ to 1 up, and provisions showing a rise of 5 to 22 cents.

Immediately at the opening, in a general stampede to buy wheat and every other grain to cover, shorts demanded prices zenith quotations. Despite big grabbing of profits for holders, the soaring of prices continued through met with violent fluctuations, and by unconfirmed rumors that bear leaders had turned to the selling side of the market. The effect of the newest buying incentives proved too powerful to be overcome except in the most transient fashion until just before trading ended. The main impetus for purchasers was a statement credited to a trade agency that drought had cost Russia the ruin of 150,000,000 bushels of grain.

Predictions of dwindling of shipments of wheat from Argentina to Europe also were circulated, reinforced by an official estimate that the Argentine new crop export surplus not available for many weeks yet would be 25,000,000 bushels less than last year. There were disturbing reports also that the world shortage of rye this season amounted to 100,000,000 bushels. Moreover, Black Sea exports of wheat during the last week had been virtually cut in half as compared with a week previous and a year ago.

Maximum wheat advances today were to more than 23 cents a bushel above the market level of a month ago, with attention concentrated on Europe's apparently critical position as to breadstuff supplies and on entire absence of new offerings of wheat exports from Russia. On the other hand, actual new export takings from North America appeared to lack commensurate volumes, indicating that foreigners, although following price upturns in some degree, were endeavoring to stick to a hand-to-mouth buying policy as long as possible.

Corn showed more sustained strength than wheat did, a circumstance seemingly due in part to perfecting of credit measures for facilitating farm storage of corn. Oats and rye responded to indications that both were enjoying fruits of an overseas demand.

Provisions reflected general buying induced mainly through strength of grains.

BONDS REPEAT GAINS IN SPIRITED TRADING

General List Joins Advance, With Foreigns Leading in Widest Rises.

New York, Nov. 5 (A.P.).—Interest in the bond market continued to grow today, with advances being registered generally throughout the list. Second-grade rails and foreign issues showed widest gains.

The total sales, $12,663,000, was the top figure since October 27, and the average price of 60 railroads, industrials and utilities was the highest since October 9, with a gain of 6-10 of a point.

Among the foreign obligations, the Argentines gave a somewhat spectacular performance, ten of the government issues moving up all the way from 2⅝ to 6¼ points. Berlin bonds were up from 1¼ to 4½ points, and the German and Italian obligations were in demand.

Continued strength in the commodity prices apparently was reflected in the bullish bond sentiment. Rail issues had many friends and were well taken. Utilities and industrials shared in the better feeling, and even transit bonds were bought at advancing quotations.

Atchison general 4s, 1995, Colorado & Southern 4½s A, 1980; Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul general 4s of 1989, Chicago & Atlantic refunding 3s, 1949; Chicago & Northwestern refunding 5s, 2037, and other carriers displayed considerable strength.

Among the Utilities, Brooklyn Union Gas 5s, Columbia Gas & Electric 5s, 1952, were well up. International Match 5s, 1947, was among the industrial climbers, while National Dairy Products 4½s and the Western Union issues showed gains.

United States Government issues were generally firm.

With full election returns in the Republicans have retained control of the House by about 100 members. Hughes was elected Governor of New York although he failed to carry a city of any consequence. The rural districts gave him a large majority. Representative Nicholas Longworth was reelected and Massachusetts elected Curtis Guild, Republican, as governor. It appears that the constitution of the new State of Oklahoma will be written by Democrats. The "Indians" voted the Democratic ticket solidly and also chose Democratic candidates to the constitutional convention.

STAGGERED SYSTEM PLAN FOR JOBLESS IS HELD ILLEGAL

McCarl Rules Government Has No Right to Use Rotary Plan.

EMPLOYES FEDERATION SAYS IDEA IMPOSSIBLE

Comptroller Refuses to Say If Decision Is Forerunner of Others.

By J. B. M'DONNELL.

Proposal of the Walter Gifford unemployment relief subcommittee headed by Harry A. Wheeler, millionaire Chicago banker, that Government jobs should be split into part-time jobs and spread around among the unemployed, received another black eye yesterday, when Comptroller General Raymond McCarl ruled that the Government had no right to enforce rotary or staggered system of employment on Government construction jobs.

The proposal previously had been ridiculed by Government administrative officials and representatives of the Government employes, led by Luther C. Steward, president, and Miss Gertrude McNally, secretary-treasurer of the National Federation of Federal Employes. The scheme, it was agreed, was impracticable. The law of the land stood in the way of carrying out the plans, it was pointed out, and against the necessary legislative change stood the enormous politically persuasive power of Mr. Steward and Miss McNally speaking for the organized Government workers.

Rule Not Forcible.

Mr. McCarl told Secretary Mellon, in response to a question, that the Government couldn't enforce the staggered or divided job system in contracts let for Government construction projects.

Mr. McCarl's office refused to give any indication whether his decision was a forerunner of similar decisions which might be made, if questions were raised, about staggered or rotary employment of workers directly in the pay of Uncle Sam.

Secretary Mellon told Mr. McCarl that it had been proposed that the Government specifications should include a provision that a rotary, or stagggered hour system of employment should be used by the successful bidders for Government construction jobs. Mr. McCarl said there was no authority in law for such attempt and that ended another of the proposals sponsored by union labor leaders, including William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, to make the laboring man divide up with his fellow laborers the meager jobs available.

The rebellion of the Government workers against Mr. Green and his acceptance of the Gifford-Wheeler scheme is fomenting with definite results to be seen. Mr. Steward and Miss McNally told their membership that, with approval of the federation executive committee, they proposed to get out of the American Federation of Labor. Preliminary reports indicate that the membership of the federation feels about the same way.

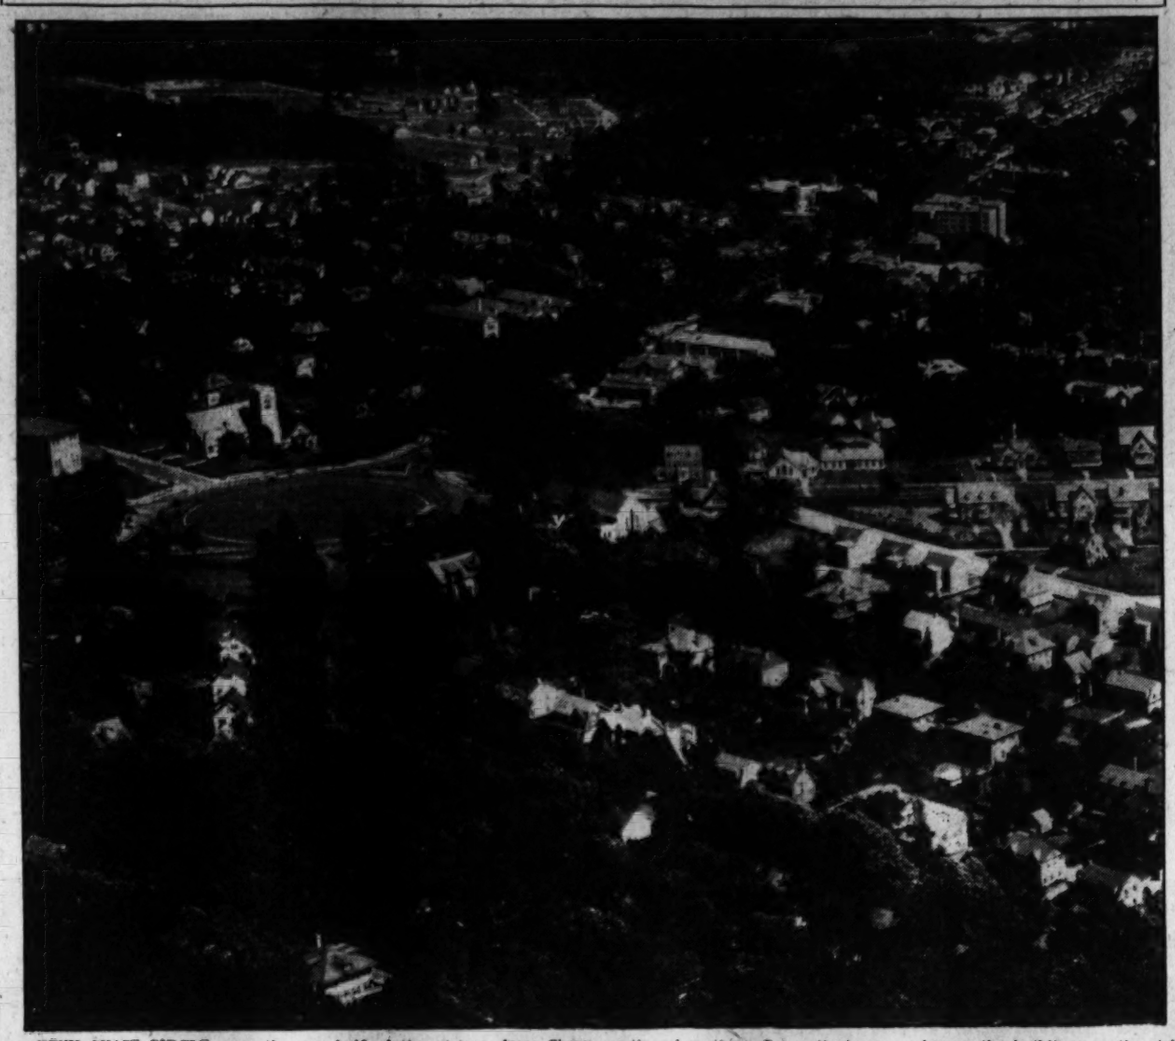
"I Told You So."

The repudiation of the reclassification legislative program of the federation by the American Federation of Labor, which prompted the proposal of the leaders of the Federal employes to withdraw from the national labor organization, was met with an "I told you so" statement issued yesterday by Mrs. Margaret Hopkins Worrell, president of the League of the American Civil Service.

Mrs. Worrell cited the fight which she had made, including appeal to the courts, to keep the Federation of Federal Employes from affiliating with the American Federation of Labor and claimed for her organization a great deal of the credit for enactment of legislation favorable to the Government employes.

"As I said before," Mrs. Worrell said in her statement, "it took the officers of the union three years and a big financial loss to learn that lesson and it has taken then 14 years longer and the loss of considerable revenue to arrive at the conclusion, to quote Mr. Steward, that 'we are strong enough to stand on our own feet' and the Federal Employes Union can 'do without the not always dependable support of the American Federation of Labor.'"

Skyviews of Washington—No. 6



CHEVY CHASE CIRCLE, once the extreme northern outpost of Washington's exclusive suburban colony, but now center of a development that runs deep into Maryland, is shown in the above air snapshot.

Western avenue may be seen running horizontally into the circle, dividing Chevy Chase, D. C., in the upper half of the picture, from Chevy Chase, Md., in the lower half.

The towered edifice just above the circle is the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, and the taller structure to its left is the Chevy Chase Apartment House.

Two street cars may be seen rounding the loop, car tracks extending north and south on Connecticut avenue, which runs at an angle to the upper right-hand corner of the picture.

The gable-roofed building to the right of the circle is the All Saints' Episcopal Church. On the left of Connecticut avenue, just south of the circle, the Elizabeth V. Brown School is just visible.

Among the buildings on the right of Connecticut avenue, running south from the circle, are the Chevy Chase Theater, the Chevy Chase Savings Bank, the Chevy Chase Arcade Building and the Legation Apartments.

COMMITTEE DRAFTS NEW TAXICAB ORDER; REGULATIONS SECRET

People's Counsel R. B. Keech Is Absent When Members Assemble.

APPROVAL IS SOUGHT BY FULL COMMISSION

Move Is Interpreted to Mean the Return to Old Meter System.

An order designed to regulate the taxicab industry in Washington was drafted yesterday by two members of the Public Utilities Commission and William A. Roberts, special assistant corporation counsel, but with People's Counsel Richmond B. Keech, noticeably absent. The order was scheduled to be issued yesterday but was postponed due to the absence of Maj. D. A. Davison, acting engineer commissioner.

The text and intent of the order were guarded with secrecy pending its approval by the whole commission. Meanwhile, Mr. Keech, who has been the sponsor for the flat-rate system from the start, was kept completely in the dark as to what the order would contain.

Counsel Barred.

This barring of the people's counsel was intrepreted as an indication that the commission plans to return to the meter system, thus putting out of business several hundred independent cab operators who are unable to raise the necessary $150 or so for the ticker. Mr. Keech, who has steadfastly fought the meter requirement, contends that the public will be deprived of a cheap and convenient mode of transportation if the flat-rate cabs are abolished.

While the meter rate will doubtless be considerably lower than that charged prior to the advent of the zone cabs two years ago, it will probably serve to appease the larger cab companies, such as the Diamond and the Black & White companies, who have been fighting the cut rates from the beginning, and will please the street car companies who have been howling that the flat-rate cabs offered unfair competition.

Rent System Cited.

The commission is also expected to take a rap at the rental cab system employed by the City Cab Co. and the Bell Cab Co., which Mr. Keech has pointed to as examples of organizations that are making money through the present system. Officials of the utilities body hold that they have the authority to bar such contracts between an operator and drivers.

Mr. Keech contended in a brief recently filed with the commission that several thousand men probably will be thrown out of employment if a regulation requiring meters on all cabs is adopted. He asked as a secondary proposal that both systems be authorized, thus leaving the choice to the discretion of the operator.

The breech between the people's council and the commission and Mr. Roberts was apparent throughout the recent hearing, though previously the utilities body had given indications of a change in attitude toward the flat-rate cabs. About two years ago the commission issued an order requiring installation of meters, but the order was held in abeyance after a compulsory liability insurance clause was held illegal.

Amos Piper, inmate of the United States Soldiers' Home, yesterday reported to police the theft of $1,700 in large denomination bills from a suitcase which he left unguarded for about ten minutes at the Soldiers' Home Hospital prior to being taken to a building and loan association.

Detective Sergt. L. M. Wilson, who investigated the report, said Piper informed him the stolen money was in the form of one $1,000 bill, one $500 bill, one $100 bill and five $20 bills.

DRIVE FOR ELECTIVE SCHOOL BODY DRAWN

Capper Bill Is Substantially Same as One Introduced Last Year.

Plans for an active campaign to obtain legislation providing for an elective Board of Education for the District at the next session of Congress were laid last night at a meeting of the joint committee for the election of the school board. This committee is composed of representatives of Parent-Teacher Associations and civic organizations.

Members of the committee will be assigned to State delegations in Congress to seek support of the bill to be introduced by Senator Capper providing for elective school board. This bill is substantially the same as one introduced last year. The committee voted to send a copy of this bill to the chairman of the joint committee on national representation for the District, asking if this committee will support it and if not to state grounds for objection.

Mrs. W. T. Bannerman, of the District Congress of Parent-Teacher Associations, was reelected chairman of the committee. The following vice chairmen were elected: James G. Yaden, delegate to the federation of citizens associations; Mrs. E. C. Rittue, of the District Congress of Parent-Teacher Associations; Mrs. Ellis Logan, of the Federation of Women's Clubs; Gen. Amos A. Fries, of the American Legion; Fred S. Walker, representing Union Labor; Herbert S. Wood, president of the Public School Association; A. H. Gregory, treasurer of the federation of citizens associations and George A. Warren, secretary of the committee.

Plans were announced for a banquet of the committee to be held after Congress opens and after subcommittees of the committee are appointed. Last night's meeting was held at the National Education Association headquarters.

Crusaders Jubilant Over Hart Victory

Plan Similar Support of Wet Candidates in Other Sections.

"The Crusaders, flushed with the victory of Michael J. Hart, Democrat, who, running as a wet, carried an agricultural district in Michigan which has been held by the Republicans for over 30 years, in Tuesday's election, announce that during the coming year, throughout most of the country, dry senators up for election and representatives will face the same vigorous method of campaigning adopted by the Crusaders in the Eighth Michigan District."

This statement was issued by the Washington headquarters of the Crusaders last night and added that the Detroit newspapers attributed Mr. Hart's victory largely to the support of the Crusaders, which is a militant antiprohibition organization that has formed in scores of congressional districts, battalions which act as shock troops in the prohibition repeal movement.

"The Crusaders, many of whose members were in uniform when prohibition was adopted," the statement added, "is not a highly centralized organization, but is composed of local groups of enthusiastic men who are determined to rid America of the prohibition curse."

CAPITAL CHALLENGED ON LEGALITY OF BAR TO GASOLINE VENDER

Hucksters' Counsel Contends License Law Protects Street Peddlers.

HEARING SET MONDAY FOR BRIEFS ON ISSUE

Unemployment and Traffic Problems May Influence Decision on Ruling.

A vigorous attack on the regulation imposed by the District Commissioners to bar hucksters of gasoline from the streets was made yesterday by counsel of the oil venders at a public hearing before Corporation Counsel William W. Bride.

District officials, who testified as to why they recommended the adoption of the regulation, were subjected to severe questioning by the attorneys. The issue finally resolved itself into whether the Commissioners have the authority to abolish the practice, in view of the law governing their licensing, and Mr. Bride gave the hucksters' counsel until Monday to file briefs on the legal aspects involved.

Fire Chief George S. Watson and Fire Marshal Calvin G. Lauber both declared that the vending of gasoline on the streets constituted a "potential fire hazard," but they admitted that there had been no fires as a result of the practice within their knowledge.

Fire Hazard Shaken.

Chief Watson, under grilling, admitted also that filling stations also constituted potential fire hazards as did any amount of gasoline.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer said his only objection to the hucksters was that they might impede the movement of traffic, but he admitted that if they operated so as not to block other vehicles he did not oppose them.

About 35 of the hucksters were represented at the hearing. After one witness had testified that he was purchasing a tank truck on time payments and that gasoline vending was his sole means of livelihood, Mr. Bride, in order to save time, admitted that there were probably a number of other similar cases, and that the regulation would probably throw many men out of employment.

Judge's Opinion Cited.

John Paul Jones, one of the attorneys, called attention to an opinion delivered yesterday morning on a case involving his client. Judge Gus Schuldt, in Police Court, held in effect that the District Commissioners have no right to limit gasoline hucksters to a house-to-house canvass because of an act of Congress of July 1, 1902. On the other hand, he upheld the provision of the police regulation stating that no fuel vehicle shall stay in one spot longer than the time needed to transfer the gasoline.

PITTS TYPEWRITERS TAKEN FROM POUND

Exhibits Will Be Used as Evidence in Contempt of Court Case.

Six typewriters, impounded two months ago by order of the District Supreme Court at the request of G. Bryan Pitts, were ordered released from that impounding yesterday so that they can be used Monday by the Government in pressing its case against G. Bryan Pitts for alleged criminal contempt of court.

The machines are the ones, it was said, that were used by Pitts "and others" in manufacturing 140 alleged spurious authorizations drawn so that Pitts could account for money he is accused of having embezzled from the F. H. Smith Co.

They were taken when Internal Revenue operatives broke into trunks at Palm Beach and found them. They were at the time looking for assets of Pitts to satisfy a claim the Government was pressing for unpaid income taxes.

Pitts had the machines impounded pending a final decision on the question he raised that they had been illegally seized. The machines, Government prosecutors said, were necessary in the prosecution of the case against Pitts.

Chief Justice Wheat, at the request of William A. Gallagher, assistant United States Attorney, signed an order requiring the United States marshal to have the machines in court next week. By them the Government hopes to prove that all 140 authorizations were written at the same time, whereas the purported dates on the authorizations covered several years.

Rheem Brought Into Court To Fight Bankruptcy Action

Convicted Broker, Returned Here From Prison, Tells Creditors' Attorney He Has "Been Out of Town;" Appears Haggard and Nervous.

Edmund D. Rheem, who has been doing time at Lorton for about four months, following failure of the mortgage house he headed, returned to Washington for a few hours yesterday to fight personal bankruptcy action.

"I have been out of town," was the way he explained it to E. Elton Jackson, attorney for a group of creditors, when Jackson wanted to know why he did not bring into court records of personal bank transactions.

Failure of Rheem, and his counsel, Leon Tobriner, to produce the records drew a rebuke from District Supreme Court Justice Letts, and, from Tobriner, a promise to obtain the data under subpena, from trustees of bankrupt Swartzell, Rheem & Hensey Co.

Rheem, last witness placed on the stand by Attorney Jackson, was not the same debonair individual he appeared when testifying at creditors hearings here last spring. He seemed slightly haggard and a little nervous, but bore himself with sufficient nonchalance to be mistaken for his lawyer by an afternoon newspaper reporter, who wanted to interview his client about conditions at Lorton.

Officials of four banks with which Rheem had personal dealings took the stand yesterday, Wilmer J. Waller, vice president of the Federal American National Bank; George O. Vass, vice president of Riggs National Bank; A. H. Lawson, vice president of the Washington Loan & Trust Co., and Francis G. Addison, president of the Security, Savings & Commercial Bank. All brought ledger cards and matter relating to Rheem's finances.

Attorney Tobriner vainly sought to have all of the evidence ruled out except that submitted by the Federal-American Bank, which bank Jackson's petition charged, was preferred to other creditors in settlements made by Rheem. Justice Letts said the matter was admissable as bearing on the question of solvency, but told Tobriner he could object afterward, if an attempt was made to use the evidence to show preference.

Tobriner also failed in an effort to have the estate of the late Clarence B. Rheem, father of the defendant, kept out of the record. Mr. Lawson was ordered to bring into court all bank records showing Rheem's connection with his father's estate.

It was for surrendering to the Washington Loan & Trust Co. notes that were not his company's property, allegedly to cover up released notes issued them, that Rheem was sentenced to seven years at the Lorton Workhouse.

Testifying to certain loans negotiated with the Federal-American Bank by Rheem, Vice President Waller said that to the best of his information the notes were paid off from collateral left with the bank.

On a similar issue, Vice President Vass, of Riggs, said certain loans negotiated there by Rheem had been paid off by applying other balances maintained at the bank by Rheem.

President Addison, of Security Savings & Commercial, testified that Rheem had failed to pay off a $3,000 note falling due January 6 of this year; that the bank had subsequently applied a $421 balance of Rheem's to reduction of the note, charging the rest to "profit and loss."

PENNSYLVANIA AVE. RAZING IS CONTINUED

Area Between 3d and 7th Streets on South Side Ordered Made Vacant.

Occupants and owners of buildings between Third and Seventh streets on the south side of Pennsylvania avenue have been ordered to surrender their leases and vacate by the Treasury Department to make way for new buildings to be constructed as a part of the Government Triangle Building program.

The entire area is to be vacated within 30 days under notices being issued by the Government and being served on tenants. In a few cases it is still necessary for the Government to acquire some of the buildings, and in these cases a "declaration of taking" is issued in which cases an amount is deposited with a court which is believed to be a fair value the detailed adjustment being worked out at a later date.

The move paves the way for the clearance of all property involved in the triangle program. Construction work is now being carried on between Ninth and Tenth streets for the new Department of Justice and between Seventh and Ninth streets for the Archives Building.

First Drug Store Is Given Padlock

District Supreme Court Orders Procedure for Violation.

The District Supreme Court yesterday ordered the padlocking of the first drug store in this city to be affected by the nuisance provisions of the prohibition law. The store is at 810 Florida avenue northwest, where Dr. Walter P. Napper conducts a drug store.

The application for a temporary padlock was filed by Capt. Harold W. Orcutt, assistant United States attorney, who charged that liquor law violations had occurred in the place. The owner is listed as Margaret E Kennedy.

The Prohibition Bureau revoked Dr. Napper's authority to fill physicians' liquor prescriptions, the bill alleges, February 14 last. Since that date, the petition says, sales of alleged liquor have been consummated in the place.

Prisoners Plan Fight On U. S. Parole Board

Two prisoners in Atlanta Penitentiary yesterday served notice on United States Attorney Leo A. Rover that on November 12 they would seek to have Chief Justice A. A. Wheat in District Supreme Court issue a mandamus compelling the United States Parole Board to grant them the benefits of the parole law and thereby release them from the jail.

The prisoners are August Dinter, sentenced from New York for narcotic offenses, and Vincent Rotoli, sentenced for an offense not specified. Both claim they were unjustly turned down by the parole board, and the notice placed the United States attorney in the position of defending the parole board.

A woman who gave her name as Miss Irene Tennell, 28 years old, of 2131 O street northwest, was found last night on the banks of the Potomac, near the Ericcson Monument, clad in wet garments. Police who took her to Emergency Hospital to be treated for shock classified it as a case of attempted suicide.

According to the police report, the woman left in her rooms a note indicating that she would attempt suicide. The note was given to police, who issued a lookout. Several hours later she was found by William C. Burggeman, of 3033 Wisconsin avenue northwest, who called police. While the woman's condition was said to be not serious, she remained in the hospital.

Paul Paul, 22 years old, a cab driver, of 2920 Ontario road northwest, last night beat off the attack of two holdup men, one of whom was armed with a pistol, he told police.

Paul said the pair hailed him at Fourteenth and L streets northwest and told him to drive to the Naval Hospital. Here one of them pressed a gun into the back of his neck and demanded his money. Paul turned around, he said, and wrested the gun from the man. Both passengers then took to their heels and escaped.

Pigeons, Communion Plates And Poker Winnings Stolen

Pigeons, 125 dozen neckties, and even communion plates from a church fell into the hands of thieves yesterday and gave police a series of grand and trivial robberies to look into. Then there was the case of the man who lost $55 profits from a friendly poker game to three holdup men, and another who fell for a "flim-flam" game and had to dodge with all his agility to keep the sharper from running him down with a car.

The neckties were stolen from Harry Farbman, Baltimore salesman, who left his car parked in front of 1332 Seventh street northwest while he went to drum up trade. Some one broke into the car and took $375 worth.

Henry Winfield Davis, of 6015 Eighth street northwest, reported the pigeons stolen. He said some one broke into his pens and took half a dozen of his pets.

Everett White, 1 Gates road northeast, told police he had quit the poker game in an apartment on Georgia avenue northwest $55 ahead and was congratulating himself. But on his way out three colored men met him at the front door, held him up and took away all the profits of the game and $2.50 additional.

A playing card trick cost Samuel Friman, of 1127 Sixth street northwest, $5 to a colored sharper, he told police. Friman said he protested that he had been cheated, and the man leaped into a roadster and then attempted to run him down.

When William E. Randell, janitor of the Petworth Baptist Church, reported for work yesterday he found the front door jimmied open and several of the office desks ransacked. The burglars had taken with them some of the communion plates and also $2 in pennies from small banks containing the offerings of the Sunday school children.

James T. Moler, operator of a drug store at 1405 North Carolina avenue northwest, told police burglars had entered the store early yesterday morning and taken 28 pints of whisky.

The pressing club of Maurice L. Kaplar was cleaned out by burglars, who gained an entrance through a vent pipe over a pressing machine. His loss was $349.

THE ONCE OVER

ARE YOU LISTENIN'?

WASHINGTON announces officially that there are twelve and a half million radio sets in the United States. But it doesn't say what it is going to do about it.

* * * *

To most people twelve and a half million will seem an underestimate. It seems that there are that many radios in the average apartment house.

* * * *

On the basis of twelve and a half million radio sets, the number of listeners is estimated to be 50,000,000, all of whom are reported doing as well as can be expected under the circumstances.

* * * *

New York leads the country in the loud speaker blight. It has 1,888,206 sets, all in sufficiently good repair to keep the neighbors complaining. The State has 7,544,832 suspected listeners, willing, unwilling and neutral. This makes New York the noisiest State in the Union and supposedly the best market for salad oils and dentifrices.

* * * *

Pennsylvania comes next on the list of States with the most outlets for Amos 'n' Andy, with 1,444,704 sets and 5,778,816 dial twisters.

* * * *

ILLINOIS is a close third among the States most susceptible to soap, pancake flour and gargle propaganda, with 1,144,597 sets and no bulbs missing. There are probably more radios than that operating in Illinois, but they are drowned out by the Chicago pistol and rifle fire.

* * * *

California and Ohio are well up on the list of States where escape from chats on ginger ales, cough drops, perfumes and coffees is most difficult. California has 839,846 loud speakers. Ohio has to struggle along with 810,767, but there are so many political orators in Ohio that the State would have noise enough even if there weren't a radio in existence.

* * * *

Massachusetts and Michigan are in the 500,000-set class, but New Jersey tops them with 625,639 sets and 2,565,120 lovers of static, Arlington time signals, newly discovered tenors and Tony Wons.

* * * *

Connecticut has 876,666 listeners to radio programs, but only 6 are listening to Connecticut programs.

* * * *

NEVADA has the lowest number of radio sets. She is listed as having only 7,869 sets and 27,542 residents who like baloney. Fancy a State with only 27,542 people in the great unseen radio audience! Why, that isn't enough people to give Rudy Vallee a morning's fan mail.

* * * *

And even at that, a big percentage of those Nevada radio fans are visiting divorce seekers from other States.

* * * *

Nevada with only 7,869 radio sets in the entire State. Ah, what a restful place it must be to live.

But how does a Nevada man know what cigarette to smoke?

Supreme Court Will Decide Status of Capital Cleaners

The United States Supreme Court will be asked to rule on an important point in connection with several large dry-cleaning establishments here, an order entered in the District Supreme Court directed yesterday.

The highest court in the land will be asked to determine whether the dry-cleaning establishments are "commerce" or "labor." If they are commerce, they come under the provisions of the Sherman antitrust act, while if they are labor, they do not.

A consent decree was signed by the Department of Justice and Alvin L. Newmyer, attorney for the dry cleaners, yesterday, agreeing to take the case to the Supreme Court for a ruling. None of the merits of the case was gone into, the case being sent up purely on a point of law.

The suit to declare the establishments in violation of the Sherman act was filed three years ago by the Department of Justice. The suit affects the Atlantic Cleaners & Dyers, Globe Dry Cleaners, Majestic Cleaning & Dye Works, the Mutual Cleaning Co., Arcade-Sunshine Co., Vogue Dry Cleaning Co., and Samuel and Charles Rubenstein, trading as the Rubenstein Cleaning Co.
